

Camp Fire Girls Present Play, "Call of Wohelo"

The Camp Fire program was presented in the school gymnasium on the night of March 26 to a very good house. "The Call of Wohelo," a three-act play, was the main feature of the program. This play was the story of a summer camp of Camp Fire girls. Among the crowd of girls was one new member, a decided misfit to the general camp-fire spirit. Seemingly, all efforts had been tried to win her over to a normal, healthy way of living, until finally under the spell of a certain Indian maid, she saw the beauty of nature and learns the Camp Fire spirit. This part was taken by Francis White, who very ably portrayed the part of Sylvia, the camp misfit.

The Indian maid, Wah-Wah-tay-see, who finally wins Sylvia over, was taken by Katherine Bisbee. Constance, the camp treasurer, worries about the safety of the money so much that finally she becomes a sleep walker. This proves to furnish the camp much excitement in the way of a ghost. Jeanette Turner, who took this part, showed herself to be much of a comedian. She gave the audience many a laugh in her sufferings with "locomotor ataxia," besides the thrills when the girls watching for the ghost find it to be just Constance.

Donna Brown, in the part of Marian, Daisy Albee as Dorothy, Ruth Turner as Emily, Harriet Morgan as Amy, showed themselves to be true camp fire girls, carrying out the camp fire ideals. They also showed themselves to be very brave in watching for the ghost and at last finding it. The Bluebird was the junior member of the camp, representing the little sister division of the camp fire organization. This part was taken by Roberta Thompson in a delightfully natural manner.

Evelyn Swendig, the camp mother, did herself proud in keeping the busy camp in order. The guardian of the girls, Elizabeth Phelps, gave an idea of the work of the guardians of such groups. This play showed the able coaching of Mrs. Walter Moore.

The proceeds of the play are to pay for the ceremonial outfits, the last large expense of the Camp Fire groups.

The Cheskamay group opened the program by the Camp Fire walking songs, in uniform.

The Aloha-hontas, under the direction of Mrs. Rodgers, gave two folk dances showing another side of Camp Fire life.

BOY SCOUTS HAVE HIKE.

Last Saturday the Boy Scouts took a hike up Willow creek. They started at 5:30 and cooked breakfast after reaching camp. The camp was made in a canyon about eight miles up the creek from Heppner. Some tests were passed during this hike. Some boys passed the fourteen mile hike test, and the mile in twelve minutes test. Others passed part of their cooking test and one passed the knife and axe test. After dinner the Scouts broke camp, returning home having had an enjoyable day.
