FAULTY CONSTRUCTION.

THE California commission ap pointed to investigate the cause of the St. Francis dam disaster re-ports that the break was due to faulty construction, says the Cor-vallis Gazette-Times, and that newspaper comments:
"That's another typical triumph

If a private concern had been erecting this dam, it would have had to submit to rigid state inspection, in addition to which, a private concern could not afford to build a dam that would go out. A private concern could not stand the loss. It could not fall back on the tax payers for replacement of the loss or the damage resulting. State laws ought to require too that state owned public utilities be assessed and taxed the ame as private utilities, that they be required to set aside a depreciation and replacement fund and do everything else that a private corporation would have to do. Dr. Frank Crane Says:

PIN PRICKS.

The gentleman who gives you a sock in the jaw does not arouse so much resentment as the lady who continually mags at you. We can stand the roar of a cannon once better than we can stand the continual dripping that wears away the stone.

It is not the big things in life that we have to fear so much as is the little things.

We ought so to order our lives that our daily intercourse with people shall be pleasant and not irritating.

I knew an old woman who had two daughters,

One stayed at home and gave up a career to take care of her mother in her old age; the other moved to a far city, rarely wrote and never came to see her.

The old woman complained continually of the little irritations her stay-at-home daughter caused her and enlarged upon the virtues of the daughter she never saw. When she died and her will was read it was found she had left every cent to the daughter who had moved away and nothing to the one who had given up everything to care for her. A father and four sons went into debt to buy a farm. Three of the boys went off, leaving the one son with his father to pay off

The father took sick and for the best years of his life the son slaved until the debt was cleared away. While the other three boys were along in their careers he had missed an education, had put off his marriage, had given up the career he had planned.

At his father's death it was found that he had left the farm to be divided up equally among the four boys. Whether we can make head or tail out of the justice of the story of the Prodigal Son, there is nothing truer to human nature. As the screech of a locomotive is velveted into a woodwind sound by distance, the irritating little rough places in personality seem to fade in those afar off.

The small imperfections in the one who stays at home are evident and continuously seen.

Rich gifts are counted poor, not only when givers prove unkind out when they prove irritating As time goes on too often the small irritations loom larger than the essential immolation.

The pin-pricks outweigh the sacrifice

To the Editor:
Your editorial calling attention to the injustice of a county with the population of Morrow being joined in a district with a county with five times its population has a great deal of merit. This legislative district was created about thirty years ago and conditions have changed a great deal in that time. It would be much more equitable if Morrow were placed in a district with Gilliam or Grant which are nearer its size in number of people and taxable wealth.
