

Local Happenings

S. E. Notson returned home on T. A. Hughes and Vawter Crawford motored to Canyon City on Monday and on Monday evening attended the big banquet of the John Day Chamber of Commerce tendered the Oregon Cattle and Horse Raisers' association. The object of their visit to the Grant county section was to meet Sam Notson, and assist him a day in his campaign in that and adjoining counties, reaching home late Tuesday evening. These gentlemen are pleased to report that the candidacy of Mr. Notson is being well received in the counties adjoining Morrow, and they confidently expect he will receive good endorsement in this part of the district at the polls on primary day.

Oscar Keithley, Eight Mile farmer, was transacting business in the city the first of the week. He had just received word of the death on Sunday evening of his former neighbor, Ben Thomas, at Astoria. The Thomas family have been making their home in Portland since leaving Morrow county last fall. The news of Mr. Thomas' death came as a shock to friends, who thought him to have been in the best of health on leaving here. No particulars were given in the telegram received by Mr. Keithley.

E. J. Evans, Lexington wheatsraiser, was attending to business in Heppner Saturday. Mr. Evans reports the change to warmer weather conditions as an improvement that will be beneficial to crops, though there has been no complaint as to the manner in which wheat is coming along in his section.

The pastor of the Catholic church, Rev. Thomas J. Brady, is a patient at the Heppner hospital, with Dr. A. D. McMurdo, who has been confined to bed since last Sunday. It is very probable that a substitute priest will attend to the church and the parish until Rev. Father Brady's recovery.

Ollie Kincaid and son were Heppner visitors on Saturday. Mr. Kincaid is one of the farmers of the Ione section that is well pleased with the present outlook for crops and looks forward to a bumper yield again this season.

Edward and Walter Reimann, farmers of the north Ione section, were visitors here on Saturday. The Reimann boys are looking forward to a fine yield of wheat this season.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hayden were in Heppner on Saturday from their home at Hardman. They report the weather conditions much improved out that way now.

"Let the Buyer Beware"

By B. R. RICKARDS, New York.
(From State Board of Health.)

People who take so-called cures or remedies on the strength of the claims made by the manufacturers in advertisements or on the labels may not only be doomed to disappointment but may frequently do themselves harm or even jeopardize their lives. Too many individuals believe health is purchasable at the drug store. If anyone doubts this statement let him pick up the daily newspaper and see how many advertisements he can find which promise, nay, guarantee, miraculous relief or cure from some one of the many ills to which flesh is heir, by just purchasing what the advertisement recommends. How profitable such methods are, is shown by the vast sums of money spent for advertising these so-called remedies.

The day on which this is written, the display advertisements in a certain newspaper contained a dozen or more remedies for relief or cure from some form of illness. Three of these were selected for discussion that you may see the foolishness and the danger of accepting the claims of the advertiser and attempting to purchase health by the bottle, tablet or by the use of some particular apparatus.

The first advertisement stated that by buying a certain product one could quickly and safely reduce his, perhaps we should say her weight. Analyses which have been made of this proprietary article have proved it to contain thyroid extract, a substance which, it is true, will reduce weight, but which has a very powerful and dangerous effect on the heart and should therefore be taken only under a physician's orders and careful supervision.

Another advertisement depicted a method of removing superfluous hair by means of the x-ray. Here again there is some truth in the advertisement for these rays will actually kill the hair follicles, but to get the desired effect prolonged exposure to the rays is necessary—a procedure liable to produce burns or even cause actual destruction of human tissue. When physicians expert in x-ray work refuse to use this method of hair removal because of the danger, do you believe that a beauty parlor operator is capable of safely operating such a machine?

The third advertisement picked out advised the use of a germ killing throat tablet. One gained the impression that one or more of the tablets would kill all the germs in the mouth capable of causing a sore throat or a cough, leaving the throat tissue healthy and vigorous. The facts are that if the disinfectant remained in contact with the germs long enough to kill, it would also injure the surface lining of the mouth.

"Let the buyer beware," is a well-known phrase in the business world. Any person who thinks to improve his health through the use of some product which he finds advertised in newspapers and magazines had better have this phrase very firmly in mind. He may find strongly worded "money back" guarantees on the label or package but there are usually many excuses ready when a disappointed purchaser tries to return the goods. The phrase "try and get it" ought to be added to the guarantee.
