APPRECIATIVE NOTE SOUNDED BY HOOVER

in business conform the confidence of the people in their institutions and in their laws?

"Government must contribute to leadership in answer to these questions. The Government is more than the administration. It is power for leadership and co-operation with the forces of business and cultural life in cities, towns and countryside. The Presidency is more than executive responsibility. It is the inspiring symbol of all that is highest in America's purposes and ideals.

"It is vital to the welfare of the United States that the Republican party should continue to administer the Government. It is essential that our party should be continued in organization and in strength in order that it may perpetuate its great principles in our national life.

"I elected by my fellow countrymen, I shall give the best within me to advance the moral and material welfare of all our people and uphold the traditions of the Republican party so effectively exemplified by Calvin Coolidge.

(Signed) "HERBERT HOOVER." President Coolidge sent Herbert Hoover, Republican Presidential nominee, the following telegram of congratulation:

"You have been nominated for the most important position in the world. Your great ability and your wide experience will enable you to serve our party with marked distinction.

"I wish you all the success that your heart may desire. May God continue to bestow upon you the power to do your duty."

Mrs. Coolidge telegraphed: "The President and I send you and yours our best wishes."

The Republican national ticket was rounded out by the nomination for Vice President of Senator Charles Curtis, the sixty-eight year old, part Indian representative from Kansas in the Upper House of the National Legislature.

The choice for Vice President came after dozens of possibilities had been discussed. It seemed almost that choosing the Vice President would be a task taking many days. But of all the large flock of aspirants very few remained the last morning of the convention. Finding himself standing alone in opposition to Senator Curtis, Gov. Fuhrer was withdrawn by his nominator. Senator Curtis received an actual unanimous nomination.

Curtis was nominated by Senator Borah. The boom for Senator Curtis had grown overnight. His victory was remarkable and rapid.

The convention dissolved with some uncertainty about the extent of the dissatisfaction in the Middle West over the refusal of the party to write into its platform the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill, twice vetoed by the President, and its insistence on coming out flat-footed for the administration policies in this and other respects.

The platform of the Republican party praises the administration of Coolidge. It pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industry and insure its prosperity and success.

"The Republican party stands for the American built, American owned and American operated merchant marine." The platform also favored the development of waterways, and the creation for a feasible plan to stabilize the coal industry.

There is a drastic plank calling for the rigid enforcement of the prohibition amendment.

In general, the platform echoes the principles of the Coolidge administration, even to the question of farm relief, which was one of the most hotly debated questions taken up. For a time it seemed that the farm relief issue would take days to thresh out.

The lack of enthusiasm noted in the earliest sessions of the convention was more than made up for by the wild demonstrations, parades, cheers and general hubbub of the last two days. All Kansas City echoed to this convention. The selection of Hoover was attended by almost unprecedented outbursts of approval.

"Electricity--- A Pioneer of Social Progress"

Says RALPH E. HEILMAN Dean of Northwestern University School of Commerce

"The electrical industry has been a pioneer in the field of customer ownership. This has for its purpose to bring about a widespread distribution of the ownership of utilities among the customers and users in the communities served. This movement is young, but already it is evident that it is one of large importance. It is important not only as a method of financing but it possesses far-reaching significance economically, politically and socially."

RALPH E. HEILMAN.

Engaged in the production and distribution of a service which exemplifies all that is progressive in modern living, it was natural that electric light and power companies should be the pioneers in the movement for customer ownership. The electric light and power industry by its very nature is more intimately related to the activities of individual members of the community than any other. Its growth has depended on the general use of electrical facilities based on the lowest possible cost.

To meet the growing demands for service, the economies of large scale production have been applied calling for new capital expenditure of almost a billion dollars a year. With earnings limited by public regulation, public confidence in the integrity and efficiency of electric light and power company management alone has made possible these huge sums.

The efficient operation of American electric utilities has always been an outstanding example of good management and individual initiative, and so there are more than three million individual investors who have expressed their confidence by purchase of power company securities.

These investors, as well as the 70,000,000 people who live in wired homes, depend upon the maintenance of the American principle of individual initiative to protect their interests.

Warns of Mosquitoes at Coolidge Camp.

Seattle, June 25.—(Autocaster)—Alan D. McDonald is not at all cheerful about President Coolidge's choice of Brule, Wis., for his vacation camp. McDonald, a retired logger, warns that the mosquitoes in Brule are simply terrible.

"The mosquitoes are so bad there," says McDonald, "that we used to hang pieces of pork on our suspenders for them to feed on. They buzz around like a bunch of tractors so that you can't sleep."
