Carroll Morrison, former Heppner boy now residing in Portland, was a visitor here on Monday, having come to Lexington for a week-end visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Hill. Carroll has recently gone into business for himself, establishing himself as a florist at a prominent corner on the east side, and he says he is now prepared to furnish flowers to the Heppner people for any and all occasions. He established this business four months ago and now has a good trade. In company with Mr. Hill, Carroll went to Walla Walla Monday evening for a short visit before returning to Portland.

W. C. Lacy is up from his Portland home this week, looking after business interests here. Adam Hahm has the Lacy land in charge this season and a very good crop is now being harvested. Mr. Lacy is just recovered from a spell of sickness that had kept him confined at home for some two months, and he states that the recent hot spell of weather in the city was just about all he could stand; didn't mind the hot weather in those years past when he was working in the hay and grain fields on the Morrow county farm, so he is contemplating taking up the old job again.

C. L. Sweek this week finished a large new fireplace in his mountain cabin, situated in the colony of Heppner summer camps in the timber up Willow creek. The Sweek family now has a very attractive summer home in the cabin erected several years ago by S. E. Van Vactor, and are enjoying the retreat from the lower valley heat much of the time these days.

FIRE! The Unsparing Thief

Human thieves, fortunately, specialize. They stick to their respective "lines."

Fire spares nothing. It often leaves a house gutted and ruined from cellar to attic.

This means that fire insurance should fully cover all that fire can destroy or damage.

A few thousand dollars added to your inventory will increase your annual premium but little.

Yet, after a fire, "fully covered" is far better than "partially covered."

Let us help you.
