

SAM G. BLYTHE CITES CANDIDATES' TRAITS

Article in Post Convincing Hoover Argument, Says Metschan.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 10.—The average thinking voter, whether he is a Democrat or a Republican, need not read one article that has been published during the presidential campaign to convince him that Herbert Hoover is the man who should be chosen President, according to Phil Metschan, chairman of the Republican State Central committee.

Therefore, let us regard these men in that light. Let us look them over and examine into them with a view to setting forth their abilities and capabilities, and especially their education and experience along the lines that should be considered—must be considered—by the average American voter if he is to vote for what is most important to him—his country's prosperity and his own.

First, what about Smith? What is his experience and his education in affairs such as must be dealt with by a President who needs a business and economic equipment in order to do his great share in maintaining this country at its present high point of prosperity and to assure the continuance of this prosperity? Alfred E. Smith was born in New York, was a poor boy in New York and has been elected governor of New York four times.

He was a member of the Assembly of New York from 1908 to 1915, became Democratic leader there in 1911 and was speaker in 1913. He was a delegate to the New York Constitutional convention in 1915 and was elected sheriff of New York in that year.

He is an able political administrator and has made an excellent record as governor of New York. He is a man of courage, attractive personality and large political attainments. He is an active member of Tammany Hall. His rise from a poor boy on the East side of New York is remarkable even in this country, where so many poor boys have progressed to high place.

Smith's competitor, Herbert Hoover, is a graduate of Stanford University, of California, and has honorary degrees from twenty-nine other universities, including five degrees from European universities. His training and life work have been along business lines rather than in politics.

He was a member of the War Trade Council, the United States Grain Corporation, the Sugar Equalization Board, the Interallied Food Council, the Supreme Economic Council, and chairman of several of these bodies.

He directed the organization of food supplies for many of the European countries during and after the Armistice and was chairman of the American Relief Administration engaged in children's relief in Europe. He was a member and vice-chairman of President Wilson's Second Industrial Conference and chairman of the European Relief Council.

These eight years in Washington as a cabinet member have given him insight into and experience with all governmental processes, especially in their relations to business and economics, and he is conceded to have a wider, more accurate and more varied knowledge of the necessities of business and trade in all their branches as related to the government, and the necessities and opportunities of government as related to business and trade, than any man of our present or our past.

He is fifty-four years old. Hoover is not a politician. His life interests and work have been in business, in production and distribution, and for the past eight years he has been at the root of all our business and economic conditions.

These records, without embroidery, are the records of the two leading candidates for the presidency, viewed in the light of the paramount presidential and executive need of the United States at this time and for the four forthcoming years. The average American voter, having his own best interests and his country's highest interests at heart, desiring the continuance of prosperity and the maintenance of our supremacy, should study them carefully.

These records and the men behind them are the brass tacks of this campaign. Platforms, speeches, publicly, propaganda, radio, movies and all the rest of the baloney are inconsequential. This is the vital stuff.

FARM MARKET TREND

Clover seed quotations continued to advance in large markets last week says the Weekly Farm Market Review of the O. A. C. Grain markets were easier in general but hay and feeds tended to become firmer. Holdings of dairy and poultry products are relatively heavy.

Corvallis, Oregon, October 15.—Broad Grain. Wheat markets were generally a little weaker last week under influence of rather liberal supplies and less active demand. The October official estimate of the total United States wheat crop was 904,000,000 bushels, a small increase over September. The Canadian estimate remained unchanged at 550,000,000 bushels, but condition was the poorest in recent years.

Hay, pastures and feeds. Firm to higher prices for hay and feeds were noted last week. High protein hay and feeds were strongest, but wheat feeds also tended to become firmer. Pastures are becoming poorer, especially in the western part of the country.

Seeds. Clover seed markets continued their upward trend last week. Toledo futures quotations on October 10 were: Alsike, October $19.25 a bushel, December $19.50; Red, October $18.55, December $18.85, January $19.00, February $19.00. On September 12 December Alsike was quoted $19.00 and December Red at $18.00.

Potatoes. A very large crop of potatoes now seems assured, although the October estimate was slightly lower than September. Digging and shipment of late potatoes is getting well under way. The price trend is downward at the present time although markets are already so low that growers have little left after paying costs.

Wool. Less active trading but a fairly favorable outlook continued to feature wool market news. Exports of wools from the United States and Canada to date this season are about twice as much as for the same period last year. About 600,000 barrels and 1,000,000 boxes have been moved to Europe and other foreign countries.

Fruits and Vegetables. Exports of apples from the United States and Canada to date this season are about twice as much as for the same period last year. About 600,000 barrels and 1,000,000 boxes have been moved to Europe and other foreign countries.

Boardman man dies here. Walter A. Goodwin, Boardman resident, who had been a patient at the Heppner hospital for some time, died there on Tuesday morning following months of illness and suffering. Mr. Goodwin was 82 years and 8 months of age, and had been a resident of Morrow and Gilliam counties for many years.

Ben R. Patterson returned to his home at South Pasadena, California, the first of the week. Mr. Patterson contemplates disposing of his drug store interests there and may return to Heppner later to take charge of the Patterson & Son drug store, operated until recently by his father, the late J. A. Patterson.

W. T. Scott of this city is very ill with pneumonia at the Heppner hospital.

Walter Luckman, Lena stockman, was a Heppner visitor on Monday and reports everything coming along all right out his way.

Hercules Shorthorn Female Sale SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1928 HERCULES FARM, SPRAGUE, WASH. 50 FEMALES—12 HERD BULLS

Sale includes: 25 yearling heifers mostly from our best Scotch families—many of them bred to Collynie Field Marshal. 12 Open heifers. 12 Cows with calf at foot or safe in calf.

Now is the time to invest in good purebred Shorthorns, because better cattle means more profit. Shorthorns are good beef cattle as well as good milkers. Their milk production provides a dependable income in addition to the calf crop. With Shorthorn calves selling at $50.00 a head or more, a good cow may be regarded as a good kind of mill to grind up cheap unsalable roughage and make it into a valuable calf. There will likely be many bargains in this sale.
