SATURDAY NAMED

Mayor Noble Joins in Asking Support; Banquet on Wednesday.

Saturday, December 1, is Boy Scout Day in Heppner.

On this day every resident of the city will be given an opportunity to contribute to the Boy Scout work. Business houses and professional men of the city will be visited on Friday, and on Saturday the homes will be called on by committees ap-pointed by the Boy Scout executive committee. The day was set aside at a meeting of the committee Suny evening. E. G. Noble, mayor of the city, has cooperated with the executive committee in proclaiming that the day be used in fostering the Scout movement. He says: "Whereas, the Boy Scouts of America have come to be recognized as one of the greatest institutions of citizenship in the United States, and it is fit-ting that the city of Heppner should accord its boys the opportunity of becoming identified with the organization and make it possible for them to receive the greatest benefit therefrom, therefore, I, E. G. Noble, mayor of the city of Heppner, concur with the local executive committee in setting aside Saturday, December 1, to be used in fostering the Boy Scout work, and I

Urges Larger School Centers for Efficiency

University of Oregon, Eugene Nov. 25.— Greater efficiency and economy could be effected in Oregon schools through a movement for the creation of larger school centers, both for elementary and nigh schools, and more careful attention to organization to eliminate waste, declared F. L. Stetson, professor of secondary education at the University of Oregon, in a talk before the second school fi

Prof. Stetson's conclusions were given as the result of a survey of costs per capita of students in Ore-gon schools and one of the biggest handicaps experienced by Oregon schools is the fact that they are so showing the cost per pupil in average daily attendance in 1495 one-room schools of Oregon. He found that the median cost in one-room schools for each pupil, annually, is $86; in the two-room schools, $60; school of 50 to 100 pupils, $50; 100 to 150, $44; 150 to 199, $45, and above 200 pupils, $43.

This clearly shows, he pointed out, that the costs are much higher per capita in smaller schools, and the greatest chance for economy lies in consolidations. Prof. Stet-son also found that in the small schools there is a lower teaching salary than in the larger, and even at that the costs are greater.

The same situation exists in the high schools, Prof. Stetson's study shows, the small schools having high costs. In a group of high schools with less than 10 pupils in attendance, the average cost per schools increases this per capita cost drops. Thus in high schools with between 40 and 50 medians and that's what the poet meant.

"In the small high school the problem of proper courses of study and proper conditions for instruction is a serious one. The survey shows a great disparity in the efficiency of the organizations, some of them wasting time right and left, getting rid of him. One of the big things looking toward economy would be to set up a reasonable teaching load, and establish a salary schedule to attract and hold the more professional type of teacher who could work in such an efficient organization.

Good Soup, Good Service. What is a Rich Man? Captain of Your Soul. No Socratic Methods.

Chiefs of many hotels competed in New York to see which could make the best soup. Bix wise men, including Clarence H. Mackay's French chef, Combes, allotted first prize to E. Alliott.
