A FINE SEND-OFF.

A FINE spirit was shown by Heppner people in the way they received the request for help of the Boy Scouts, and the excellent financial response thereto. The amount given is sufficient to assure the work of the Boy Scouts for the coming year, providing in addition to running expenses, sufficient money to construct a cabin at the summer camp of the Blue Mountain council. For this the executive committee is thankful.

It has made possible a program of truly constructive work next year. A partial outline of the program given in a news story in another column this week, calls for a district meeting of Scout troops in Heppner. In making such a meeting possible here, Heppner people have not only enlarged the scope of opportunity for local Scouts, but also have they again placed the stamp of progressiveness on our town, which will aid materially in keeping it in the front rank of live communities of Eastern Oregon.

We predict that after next year's program of scout work has been carried out, it will be a far cry to the day when Heppner people will go back on their Boy Scouts.

SAWYER ON AUTO LICENSES.

Oregon Voter.
ROBERT W. SAWYER, Bend newspaper editor, is a member of the state highway commission, and a keen student of the automobile license situation. In a recent edition of his Bulletin, he summarizes his position on the agitation for adjustments in costs of car licenses. We quote from his editorial of December 11:—

"The solution of the question can be reached wisely only after a step by step approach to the subject. Before any sort of intelligent consideration and study can be given, certain fundamentals must be agreed upon. We believe that there is already general agreement on the propositions that (1) the annual gross income available for highway purposes must not be reduced, (2) reimbursement to the counties for loss of personal property taxation on the motor vehicle shall continue in at least the present amount and (3) that losses in license revenue brought about by reduced license cost shall be made up by an increase in the tax on gasoline. So far, the possible increase in the gasoline tax has been discussed on a whole cent basis. However, a tax could be laid on the basis of a fraction of a cent."

STORE WINDOWS.

STORE windows make the holidays. The man who knows the art of window dressing well enough to make an effective Yuletide or New Year's display, contributes greatly to the general spirit of festivity on those days.

This matter of window dressing is tremendously important. Where windows are attractive, the persons that pass on Main street are made gay, more alive by looking at them. They provide inspiration. They awaken ambition.

Streets with dull windows seem dead in comparison to streets of decorated, illumined shops. Streets with windows dressed tastefully,

Dr. Frank Crane Says:

THE TIME BINDER

Some professor, I noticed the other day in the public prints, referred to the man as the time builder.

I take it that what he meant is this—though, of course, being a professor, he probably meant something else, something you and I cannot understand. It is never quite safe to say you comprehend just what a professor means; he rather resents it, but, as I was saying, what he meant, or might, could, would or should have meant, is this:

Stones, sticks and all lifeless things are fixed, helpless and cannot move of themselves. They are bound.

So are the plants and all vegetable forms of life.

Animals are space binders; that is, they can move from place to place, and by their power of motion can bind together things remote.

Man is also a space binder, because of his power of locomotion; but he is more. He can remember things in the past, and he can look forward to events in the future.

Hence he is a time binder.

Man differs from the lower animals because he preserves his past experiences. He lives not only now, but all about him now flutter flocks of yesterday; from his now mountain he can see long tomorrow vistas.

He is eternally planning. In proportion as he binds the future to him he becomes more of a man in every way.

Many a silly word would be restrained, and many a rash action would be prevented by a consideration of the future.

Every deed is to be judged not only by its present advisability, but by how it bears on our whole career.

TURKEYS BRING NEARLY $6000

Condon Globe-Times.

The first shipment of turkeys ever to be shipped from Condon was handled by Swift and Company and left here Wednesday night. It contained 19,933 pounds of dressed turkeys and for them checks to the amount of $5,704.36 were issued to local growers. Checks ranged in amounts from $7.36 to $278.58.

A few years ago practically no turkeys were marketed from this vicinity and this year it is estimated that before the season closes nearly 60,000 pounds will have been sold. The prices paid for turkeys shipped this week were 32c for first; 30c for hens; and 20c for seconds and old toms.

PAUL'S LAST MESSAGE
11 Timothy 4:13, 16-18

THE BIRTH OF JESUS
Luke 2:18-20

REV. SAMUEL D. PRICE, D. D.

If the full time is given to the Christmas lesson the closing subject in the life of Paul should be considered in connection with the Review next Sunday.

After about two years Paul was released from the first Roman imprisonment. It may have been because the accusers in Jerusalem, knowing what a poor case they would have in the Emperor's court, decided not to appear against the man they had already heckled for two years during his confinement in Caesarea. From I Timothy and Titus, which were written during the free time, and from traditions that are well established it appears that Paul did considerable journeying, going as far east as Spain and westward to Asia Minor again. Then came the second arrest, probably in the region of Macedonia. On reaching Rome the prisoner was placed in the Mamertine prison. The traveler is shown a reputed cell close to the Forum. It is underground, dark and cold.

Tradition says that Paul went home as the sword of the executioner severed the head somewhere on the Ostian Bay, about three miles outside of Rome.

Heaven and earth are closely related. It was while shepherds were caring for their flocks just outside Bethlehem that the most glorious song of all time had its first rendition for their benefit. The recitation was given by an angel who bade them "Fear not" and supported the command by announcing that the night of waiting for the promised Messiah was over, for their Saviour had been born in Bethlehem. Instead of a Deliverer who would come forth in fullness of strength they would find a Babe, who was the Christ Child. Meanwhile the fields were all radiant with a Shekinah glory.

Then the heavenly choir burst forth into the "Gloria in Excelsis." They began by praising "God in the highest," which is always the right way of approaching the Throne. The Pronouncement was a declaration of peace on earth, good will to men. Though He was King of Kings He came to establish peace, first between man and the Father, and then between all mankind.

Wisely the shepherds, as by common agreement, said "Let us go to Bethlehem and see this thing that has come to pass." There they found Him, cradled in a manger Who, though Very God, had in the incarnation been born of the Virgin. The shepherds became the first evangelists and went forth to tell this good news. We too must listen to learn, come an acre, and then tell the world of the Gift of God and the love of Jesus. May Christmas be merry indeed for you in Christ!

THE BUNNIES' CHRISTMAS

It was the night before Christmas. Mrs. Rabbit had just tucked her babies in bed and put out the light. She went down stairs to join Br'er Rabbit who was decorating the tree.

Everything was very still.

Suddenly there came a whisper: "You let me know if you get to sleep first, and if I get to sleep first, I'll tell you." It was Billy Bunny.

"All right," came back the answer in a whisper, "but I hope you get an airship and I get an automobile for Christmas." This time it was Bobbie Bunny, who couldn't seem to get his eyes shut.

All was very still again.

By and bye there came another whisper. This time it was Billie: "I wonder if we could see Santa Claus if we peeked over the bannister?"

"Let's try!" said Bobbie, almost out loud.

They tiptoed to the bannister and looked over. They could see nothing.

Suddenly Br'er Rabbit let out a "CHERCHO!" that almost frightened them to death so they rushed back to bed, lay very still and went to sleep. Finally Mister Sunshiny Man came over the Sugar Plum Mountain and woke them up.

"Merry Christmas," shouted Bobbie to Billie.

"Same to you and many of them," came back the answer.

Out of bed they bounced and shouted greetings to their father and mother. Br'er Rabbit hopped out of bed and put on his dressing gown. He was followed by his good wife who started down the stairs in her night-gown and wrapper.

Br'er Rabbit pulled all the window shades and turned on the tiny electric lights on the tree.

"Whoopie!" shouted Billie. "I got an automobile!"

"Ge-e-e. Look at my airship. Watch me wind it up. I got a pop gun, too." Bobbie's joy was over flowing.

Just then there was a TAP, TAP, TAP outside. Bobbie rushed to the window and peeked out. "It's Brother Bear pounding on a log to see if there is any money in it," whispered the youngster.

"That's fine," said Mrs. Rabbit. "I have his stocking all ready for him. It has a jar of honey in it, too."

Ey and bye there was a knock at the door. "Come in!" shouted Br'er Rabbit. "Just in time," he added. "Look for your stocking."

"Just what I wanted!" exclaimed Brother Bear, when he found the honey.

"Our Christmas will be all the happier because we shared it with you," said Mrs. Rabbit, as Bobbie hit one of the electric bulbs with his pop gun.

Homemade Decorations

Easy and Attractive

Children love to trim Christmas trees, so why not let them make their own decorations? Paper trimmings are easily made and will furnish amusement for even the smallest children during the winter evenings.

To make cat's ladders two strips of colored paper are cut out about one-half inch wide and 12 inches long. Place two ends together at right angles, and paste securely. Fold the strips over each other alternately until all the paper is folded. Paste the two loose ends together and stretch the ladder out. The short ladders may be hung from the branches of the tree or long chains may be made in the same way and draped around the tree.

Decorative lanterns may be made by cutting bright paper into four to five inch squares. Cut off one corner from one side to use as the handle. Measure in one-half inch from the edge on each side and draw parallel lines one-quarter inch apart within these points. With the scissors cut on the lines, making slits. Paste the top and bottom together with the slits vertical and paste the handle on top. Either crepe or plain tissue paper may be used.

Small cones from evergreen trees may be gilded with gold paint and hung on the tree. In this way decorations may be made at home with very little expense.
