Chas. Wicklander and son Hector and John Brice attended Pomona meeting at Ione. The Pomona was entertained by the Willow Creek Grange and the 5th degree work was given by the young people of Willow Grange.

Boardman high school played their first conference game on Friday night with the Ione team at the Ione gym. The game proved to be all Boardman's the score being 18-9. The Boardman line-up was Alvie Mefford, Dallas Wilson, Gene Minnis, Buster Rands and Carl Wicklander, and Vernon Root, Walter Dennison and Wilbur Stevers, subs. The Boardman players were a bit unfortunate in having the pockets of their clothes rifled while they wore their basketball clothes. A watch and chain, pocket knife, fountain pen and change were taken. This was keenly regretted by the Ione authorities. Ione players treated the Boardman boys fine—served them a fine lunch after the game. A return game will be played in Boardman later.

Boardman people were shocked to hear of the sudden death of Wm. Gogger in the Pendleton hospital. Mr. Gogger formerly owned a ranch on the east side and often visited his daughter, Mrs. Leo Cooney. Funeral services were held Tuesday, January 8, in St. Patrick's church in Heppner, the Rev. Father Brady officiating. Wm. Gogger was born in Illinois and being 66 years old at the time of his death. He moved from Minnesota to Oregon in 1912 and in 1915 his wife passed away. He leaves the following children: Leo, Henry, Gerald and Jean Gogger, Mrs. Leo Cooney and Mrs. Minnie Ramsey.

GO TO BED STORIES.

(By FARMER SMITH)

Bobbie Bunny sat on the bank of the river looking into the water. Every now and then he would put his head this way and then that. Finally he stood on his head and looked into the water.

"I can't see it myself," he mused. By and by his sister came along, hopping and skipping.

"What in the wide world is the matter with you?" asked Billie Bunny.

"I was looking for the hole in my face. Mister Jay Bird told me I had a hole in my face and I have been looking in the water ever so long and I can't see any hole—can you?"

Billie laughed so she was all doubled up.

"I told you Mister Jay Bird was always up to mischief and when he told you that, you didn't think. There is no hole in your face except—"

"Oh! is that it? I never thought of my mouth being a hole. That's a good one."

"Yes and it proved to you how foolish it is to worry about something which doesn't concern you. What difference would it make if you DID have a hole in your face?"

"Give it up," said Bobbie, as he got up from the bank and looked at his sister. Then he asked: "I wish you could tell me where there is something exciting we could do, do you know?"

"Let's go and look for something," replied Billie.

The two walked down the rabbit path until they came to a broad field.

"I tell you what let's do. Do you see that hole over there?"

"That isn't the hole that ought to be in my face, is it?" asked Bobbie.

"I should say not. But let's see who can get into that hole first. I'll count 'one, two, three' and then say 'GO!'"

"Shall I pull the hole in after me?" asked Bobbie.

"Quit your kidding and get down to business," said Billie.

Although the bunnies had not noticed it, Mister Jay Bird was sitting in the sassafras tree above their heads and when he heard: "One, two, three, GO!" he shouted: "Hey, there, wait a minute!"

Bobbie and Billie stopped in their tracks. "What's the big idea?" asked Bobbie.

"How far would you have been if you hadn't stopped?" asked the Jay.

"You mind your own business and we'll mind ours," snapped Billie, as they started over again and were soon flying down the field like the wind.

The Telephone serves best when its service is universal

YOUR TELEPHONE is connectible with 143,000 other telephones in Oregon, and with nineteen million telephones all over the United States.

A moment's thought will show that such a broad service—putting your telephone at the center of a network that covers Oregon and the nation—is made possible only by uniformity of equipment, uniformity of method, and close-working harmony between the operating companies of these widely separated geographical areas.

About two-thirds of the nation's telephones—the nineteen million to which your telephone is readily connectible—are operated by a group of companies known collectively as the Bell System. The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company is one of these operating companies.

Not only does the relationship give the Pacific Company the right to all patents, technical experience and results of scientific research of the Bell System, but it enables the Pacific Company to operate at the lowest possible cost—thereby keeping charges for telephone service at a minimum. Through the Western Electric Company—the manufacturing, supply and distributing organization of the Bell System—the Pacific Company is able to get its telephone supplies about 20% cheaper than it would get them otherwise.

The co-ordinating head of the Bell System is the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, a national organization with more than 420,000 stockholders. It owns a majority of the stock of the operating companies. Its fundamental interest is the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost, consistent with safety, and its fifty-year-old guiding principle has been to seek no speculative or large profits, but to work solely for a constantly enlarging and improving telephone service.

The ownership of a majority of The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company's stock by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has been regularly published in the American Company's annual report, and spread broadcast for many years. It is one of the chief reasons for the advanced type of telephone service enjoyed in Oregon and on the Pacific Coast.

We are proud to be one of the family of associated companies whose mutual cooperation and access to the telephone experience and research services of the nation have given to Oregon and the United States the most nearly universal telephone service possessed by any country.
