Official Paper for Morrow County.

The partially completed inaugural stand in front of the Capitol where Herbert C. Hoover will take the oath of office as the thirty-first president of the United States.

DON'T WEAKEN, CHAPMAN.

SENATOR JOE DUNNE and others would oust C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon Voter, from the legislature, charging him with lobbying—all because Mr. Chapman is furnishing newspapers of the state the first really worth-while reports of the legislature's proceedings ever furnished the up-state press, and this at a price within their reach.

Mr. Chapman has accepted their challenge, welcoming the investigation suggested in Mr. Dunne's charges. He has declared that if the investigating committee can find anything to substantiate the charges he will voluntarily leave the legislative halls and cease publication of the Voter.

It would appear that certain members of the legislature object to their actions being bared before the public eye. It may be that the thorough Chapman reports make them watch their step a little too closely, making them irritable. Mr. Chapman is too intelligent to be found guilty of the things charged, and also too much of a gentleman. He is rendering the public a big service. Here's courage to stick by his guns.

THE PERSONAL ELEMENT.

TOO much cannot be said in favor of the radio and the movies as educational factors in our modern life. They make it possible for people who otherwise would not have the opportunity, to enjoy the very best in musical and dramatic entertainment. Most any evening one may recline comfortably in his easy chair at home and by the simple twist of a knob hear the kind of musical or speaking program of his choice, most all of which are given by performers of note; or by the expenditure of a nominal sum obtain a seat at the local theater and see pictured stories by the highest paid actors in the country. This is a development of the twentieth century that makes it possible for everyone to learn and appreciate the highest type of entertainment—though one must discount a great deal of trash offered through the same channels.

Not often, however, is it the privilege of the people of the smaller communities to see and hear the talent in person, ranking with the best of the silver screen and micraphone performers. Next Thursday such an opportunity presents itself in the appearance here of Sidney Landon, whose specialty is the true-to-life reproduction of famous literary men. An unusual entertainment, in that it is entirely different from anything so far offered by cinema or radio, it brings local people the chance to get an insight into the lives of the men whose books they may have read and to gain thereby a deeper and keener appreciation of them. Mr. Landon's life work is character study. Critics have said of him that he makes his characters so real that one cannot tell but what they have actually appeared in person. This he has done through meticulous care and study of the men whom he portrays.

The humor, wisdom and philosophy of these famous men as given through the personal contact, we might say, with them, is something impossible to be gained to a like degree in any other way. To those who appreciate literature, and through it the meaning of life, the appearance of Mr. Landon in Heppner will be welcome, indeed.

KITCHEN ART.

NO, WE are not referring to the culinary art. "Kitchen Art" is just what we mean—and there is such a thing.

At least so thinks the Art Alliance of America, which has announced a competition for designs to glorify that ancient and honorable institution internationally known as the kitchen sink.

This movement deserves the support of everyone.

Now we know the secret behind the domestic unrest of recent years. The ugly sinks are responsible. The cast iron sink has kept more women out of their homes than the movies, jazz music and automobiles all rolled into one, according to some experts.

The white enamelled sink of modern days is just as bad. It's too clean to make dirty—and so many housewives have preferred not to use it, just to look at it.

The ideal would be a kitchen sink both artistic and adapted to many uses. Not too ugly to loke at, not too pretty to use.

May we suggest a kitchen sink with the faucets fashioned on a sort of fountain-of-youth plan, with little cupids chasing themselves over the exterior?

No doubt young wives and daughters would be attracted to it irresistibly. All hail the future saviour of the Amreican home who will design the best kitchen sink!

Residence owners of Heppner will have a chance to cooperate in the successful staging of the championship basketball tournament here next Thursday, Friday and Saturday by supplying rooms for players of the visiting teams. The committee in charge desires to have available rooms listed as soon as possible, and will appreciate prompt response. Rooms may be listed at the office of F. W. Turner & Co. Let's give the visitors a liberal sample of Heppner's hospitality.

All indications are that the snow is going off just right for Morrow county to receive the most benefit from it. All sections of the county report frost well out of the ground, and practically no water running off. In Heppner lawns are green under the snow, and the ground very soft. When spring opens up in a few weeks, the country should indeed present a beautiful appearance.

"Mother, where's my hat?"

It was Bobbie Bunny who had come in hurriedly before going to school.

In a few moments Billie Bunny rushed in with: "Mother, where are my school books?"

A voice from above shouted down "Mother, where's my necktie?" It was Old Man Rabbit.

Without saying a word, Mrs. Rabbit found the hat, the school books, and her husband's necktie. Then she kissed the bunnies good-bye and waited for the Old Man to come downstairs. Finally he came and she said:

"I think we ought to call this the 'Where's MY? Family.' I never in my life saw people so careless. The children leave their hats, books, neckties—"

"Now you're hitting at me and my necktie. How did I know I left it downstairs?" Old Man Rabbit was a bit peeved.

"I am not talking about that, but what I want to know is WHY everybody around here thinks I am a walking encyclopedia."

"We think you are the sweetest, dearest Mother in this world—and that's not all. We ask you to do these things because we love you that's all. You know it's the people you do for in this world that you love, not necessarily the ones who do for you."

"You must love me a lot; but where is my frying pan?"

"How do I know? You had it last. If I have to hunt for it, that is what you would have to do, so why make two of us work?"

"Where is my pocket book?" asked Mother Rabbit.

"That's different," said Br'er Rabbit, with a laugh. "Money is in my line, but not frying pans." And with that he started to hunt, while Mrs. Rabbit whispered softly: "It's those you do for you love, my dear!"

Colored Rookie—"I'd like to have a new pair of shoes, suh."

Sergeaant—"Are your shoes worn out?"

Rookie—"Worn out! Man, the bottoms of mah shoes are so thin ah can step on a dime and tell whether it's heads or tails."

CHRISTIAN GROWTH

John 1:40-42; Matthew 16:15-18; John 21:15-19; 2 Peter 3:18.

REV. SAMUEL D. PRICE, D. D.

Ideals are to be actualized in order to make them practical. We have now had seven lessons in this quarter which present great truths in the Christian religion. Today we observe how these facts can be wrought into real life. Peter is chosen as the special example. At the beginning he was quite like the average fisherman on Galilee. His human nature is evident throughout and thus he becomes the more helpful to us.

In addition to the passages of Scripture indicated in our heading, the following are also to be studied in the present research: Luke 2: 40-52; Ephesians 4;11-16; Philippians 1:6; 3:12-16; Colossians 1:9-11; Hebrews 6:1-3. These topical lessons have an added value because they require constant reference to the Bible.

Andrew is the man who introduces us to Simon, his brother. Both John and Andrew were followers of John the Baptist until Jesus came. They then turned to the superior Teacher. Andrew is convinced that Jesus is the long looked for Messiah after spending the day with Him. At once he seeks out his own brother and tells the startling news. Simon comes to observe and ends with an open friendship for the Nazarene who speaks prophetically of his work and gives him the name of Peter, a Rock, signifying the nature of the work he will carry forward in establishing the Kingdom on earth.

Some months later Peter is among the goodly number who are called to become disciples, which means learners. Later he was selected as one of the Twelve and styled an apostle—one sent forth. Then read schooling began for the work that was to consume the rest of his life. He joined a teacher-training class, with Jesus as the Master Teacher. After about two and a half years of general and intensive instruction a quiz class was held at Caesarea Philippi when Jesus asked the blunt question "Who do men say that the Son of man is?" Though the answer may have been quickly phrased it was the result of much meditation. Boldly Peter answered "Thou art the Christ ,the Son of the living God." At once the Teacher commends him for this reply which announces the full divinity of this despised Man of Nazareth.

Living up to great ideals and truths is another matter. Peter failed completely on the night of the crucifixion, though he had just boasted that he would champion the Lord even unto death. As soon as the cock crew Peter re-established his thinking, though remorse was unbounded. It remained for Jesus to recommission him after the resurrection. This was done after the miraculous draught of fishes at Galilee. Three times Peter was asked, "Lovest thou me," and each time a positive answer was given. Christian growth had begun once more. The fullness of his spiritual strength is manifested when Peter preached that sermon that obtained 3,000 converts on the Day of Pentecost. In one of his epistles Peter wrote, as in our Golden Text, "But grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."
