LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

The winds of the past few days have dried the ground in many fields so that farmers are now getting busy with the spring plowing. In the lone country, Leo Beckner started his plow Wednesday. He uses a tractor and the ground was working in excellent shape with only here and there small patches that are yet a little too wet. In the same locality, Louis Bergsten, who is on the McMurray place, is getting his equipment ready to go to plowing and many others will be busy right away.

J. W. Vaughan, who has been spending about two months at the Chas. Oaten place near Reid's mill in the mountains, came in on Wednesday evening. The snow is gone to the edge of the timber. Mr. Vaughan states, but there is yet some 15 inches of solid snow beyond that point and getting out with teams is yet quite difficult. Mr. Vaughan is feeling well again after fully recovering from a bad case of influenza from which he suffered early in the season.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hiatt came in on Tuesday from the home of J. H. Pearson at Lena, where they had been visiting for a couple of weeks. After spending a few days in Heppner, where they have been for the winter, Mr. and Mrs. Hiatt will return the end of the week to their home near Vancouver, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Gorgor of the Lexington section were visitors in the city yesterday. They are the proud parents of a son born to them on December 10, 1928, at Pendleton and the boy is a name sake of his grandfather, the late William A. Gorgor, and this was the first visit of the young man to Heppner.

Mr. and Mrs. Jason Hiddle of Rhca creek were visitors here on Tuesday. Mr. Hiddle is pleased that all of the snow out his way has gone into the ground, where it will greatly benefit the growing crops.

Mrs. Rebecca Patterson arrived home Friday from Corvallis where she spent the winter with her niece, Mrs. A. A. Amort. Though ill while away, Mrs. Patterson is feeling quite well now.

J. I. Prudy, traveling freight and passenger agent of the Union Pacific System, with headquarters at Pendleton, was a visitor in Heppner today, looking after the interests of his company.

Commercial Club Heads Meet at Eugene 19 to 23

University of Oregon, Eugene, March 6.—(Special)—Community projects and problems of all types will be thoroughly studied by officials of chambers of commerce, and other commercial organizations of Oregon at the annual short course for chamber of commerce secretaries to be held at the University of Oregon, March 19 to 23. Secretary Dean T. Goodman, President L. Van Marter, and other officials of the Heppner chamber of commerce have been invited to attend the session, which promises to be the most successful of the short courses so far.

Airport development, community publicity and land settlement will be among the chief problems discussed at the conference, with expert speakers leading the forum meetings. It is expected that the Heppner officials, if they attend the conference, will return with many ideas for promoting community projects, and with a comprehensive view of what other commercial organizations of Oregon are doing along this line.

Began several years ago, the short courses sponsored by the University school of business administration have developed rapidly in interest and size of attendance, and are believed to answer a need for a common meeting place for community and civic workers of Oregon. Dean David E. Faville is in charge of this year's conference, which is of particular interest because of the commonwealth conferences which will be revived on the Eugene campus at the same time and many matters of interest to secretaries will be taken up at these sessions.

As in the past, secretaries present for the first time will wear the green caps of university freshmen, while those who have attended the conferences for several years will have graduation exercises during which they will parade in caps and gowns and receive "diplomas." Students of the university will be home on vacation at the time, and the secretaries will have the "run of the campus."

when you are going to do anything. For instance, when you go away, you should tell your mother, or your father, where you are going and—"Always!" asked Billie.

"Yes, always, for they might want you and then they would not know where to look. Someone might come with a lot of carrot pie for you and if Mother didn't know where you were, you wouldn't get the carrot—see?"

"I guess I see now. But this is Saturday and I'll help Mother while you go to the store," said Billie.

When breakfast was over, Bobbie started for the store while Billie began to help her mother dust the house. "I wish Mrs. Squirrel would come with her bushy tail and dust for us," laughed Billie.

By and bye Billie got as far as the pantry. There she saw a large jar of jam. She dusted all around it and all the while it was bothering her. Finally she took a little bit of it and it DID taste so good. "I guess I ought to tell Mother where I am," she thought. All the while the jam was worrying her.

Temptation got the better of her and off came the lid of the jar and into it went Billie!

When the little Rabbit was full of jam, she sneaked out into the parlor and there was her Mother.

"Oh! What in the world is this thing?" Mother Rabbit acted as though she were frightened to death. "Get out of my home!" she shrieked.

"It's your little Billie," pleaded the little one.

"I don't believe any one of my children look like you."

"Let me kiss you," whined Billie.

"Not with that face!" exclaimed Mother Rabbit.

"I'll never do it again, Mother!" cried Billie.

"Then wash your face and I'll let you kiss me," answered the Mother, trying hard to keep back a smile.
