TIME TO ACT.

AVIATION is past the experiment-al and joke stage. It has be-come, and is becoming more and vital factor in the business life of the nation. committee from the local post American Legion and no time should be lost in obtaining the same and fitting it up for an emergency field. When, and if, this is done the government stands ready to install a 2,000,000 candlepower beacon light at a cost of some $1,800, that will mark the field for night flyers, and the field will be marked on the official government aviation map.

Already two air mail routes pass in the close proximity of Heppner, and two more projected routes will intersect the present routes very near here. There is no doubt, in fact practical assurance is given that they will pass directly over an emergency landing field does not entail an extortionate expense for construction and maintenance. It may be, however, that the field would be run at a loss for some time. It is practically certain that the established routes will go over the towns that are the first to provide landing facilities, and once the routes are established there is little likelihood that they will be changed.
