PASSED AT LAST.

NOT a panacea for all agricultural ills, the farm relief bill passed by congress this week, after being made the football of politicians for some six years, may not aid materially in the disposal of the 1929 wheat crop. President Hoover aims to get the machinery in operation immediately, however, and with announcement that upwards of a million dollars should be available this fall, it is possible that some immediate benefits may result.

It is stated that the farm bill as passed corresponds very closely to the program outlined by the president. It marks a signal victory for his administration, though the effect of its passage may spell the future of the republican party in 1932. However, that may be, a general air of satisfaction is apparent that at last something has come of the many years of laborious effort to put agriculture on the same economic basis with the manufacturing industry.

Oregon's own senator, Charles McNary, has headed the agricultural relief program since its inception and the bill finally passed bears his name. That he has been conscientious and persistent in his efforts is undeniable. To him the fruits of victory must seem very sweet.

The bill provides for the establishment of a fund of $500,000,000 dollars by the government for the purpose of making loans for the preparing for market and marketing of farm commodities, and education along lines looking to the ultimate elimination of exportable surpluses in the United States. It provides for the establishment of a federal farm board and advisory committees, and permits the formation of cooperative marketing organizations that may have the privilege of borrowing from the fund of $500,000,000 up to 80 per cent of their capitalization.

It looks, indeed, like better times are ahead for agriculture, but the ultimate success of the venture still depends on the cooperation, intelligence and industry of the American farmer.

The Joy of Serving

This beautiful morning I left my bed early, put on part of my clothing, and went to a front window where a rocker stood waiting. I love to watch early morning passers, while my morning paper is coming.

The newsboy presently appeared. With him was a much smaller boy—evidently a brother—not over five at the very most. This little fellow carried three or four papers under his tiny arm. Proudly he strode beside his senior, his eyes dancing with delight, at the trust reposed in him. I could not hear his words, but he evidently asked if he should deliver my paper; the big brother nodded, as any great personage might do in approval of a subordinate.

The tiny boy dashed up my steps—seven of them, and it required effort for his short legs to accomplish the man-sized elevations; how he swung and glowed and smiled in the sweet morning air, wholly oblivious to the spectators eyes that watched him from behind the lace curtain! With an expression of profound interest, he singled out one of the three papers and placed it carefully at the bottom of my door, just as near to putting it into my hand as possible; then he turned and sped away, laughing, as fast as those short legs could carry him.

His financial accomplishment could not have been over a half-cent gain—no, it was not that; the little fellow was in glee because he could do something good—something useful for somebody, and do it well. For him, the delivery of that newspaper was a super-accomplishment. Had I been fully dressed, I might have frightened him by rushing out and seizing the darling in my arms.

Do we grown-ups get a "kick" out of the worthy deeds we do for others, if any? Sometimes I have to study awhile, before I can recall any good deed I have done lately. I have not quite become "as one of these."
