Official Paper for Morrow County.

ELIMINATE FIRE HAZARDS.

A SHORT time ago the city fire chief published a notice in these columns warning all property-owners of the approaching dry season and the consequent danger of fire...

Now that the dry season has arrived in earnest, these stand as a constant menace to nearby buildings. It is short-sightedness, indeed, for property-holders to allow their property to be jeopardized...

A permit from the city is necessary before these can be burned off. And while on the subject of fires, the fire chief also sees the need of an organized fire-fighting company.

AT HEPPNER THE 3rd AND 4th JULY 4, 1929, is the nation's 153rd birthday. Is there any red-blooded American who does not know and honor the day?

The lengthening span of time since that memorable day in 1776 when our forefathers, after a long hard war, declared their separation from the mother country...

In celebrating the Fourth this year, many will stop and consider what the day means to the nation. They are good citizens. They will not jeopardize life or property by reckless driving on their way to and from celebrations...

Good rains followed by sunshine have made crop prospects brighter. Effects of farm relief legislation are already being felt, and dollar wheat seems assured.

Heppner is now counted out of the running in the Wheatland League pennant race. They stayed in long enough to throw a scare into the league leaders...

The suspense is terrible. Heppner's juvenile population will be unburned beyond recognition awaiting the opening of the swimming tank.

er's juvenile population will be unburned beyond recognition awaiting the opening of the swimming tank. "Sun-suits" have been the chief wearing apparel of the kiddies for a week.

A reawakening of interest in the lumber industry near Heppner is welcome news. Development of more resources means more people, more life and more business.

REVIEW. READ PSALM 130. REV. SAMUEL D. PRICE, D. D.

Few quarters' lessons cover more than the present one. Numerous outstanding characters appear. A great nation goes from prosperity into captivity. The general subject is "Prophecy and Kings of Judah's Decline. The chronology covers 169 years, from the time of the death of Uzziah to the Fall of Jerusalem. Scripture portions include Kings, Chronicles, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Lamentations. Fourteen opportunities for character study are given: Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Hilkiah, Jonah, Shaphan, Huldah, Pashur, Zedekiah, Irijah, Ebed-Melech, the Rechabites and Nehemiah.

While kings should have invariably been worthy leaders of their people such was the exception rather than the rule. Too often they were ready to accord with the loose morals of the day rather than to act as statesmen and lead the populace back to enduring social relationships.

In contrast with kings and other officials of high rank, the prophets stand out as examples in true patriotism. Isaiah started out with the idea that he was God's specially appointed ambassador and always ought to be faithful to such a trust. When kings were false he withstood them to their face and tried to help them back to a worthy conception of their office. The vision by which Isaiah was indited into office continued back to enduring social relationships.

Hezekiah revealed what a king could do in ways of righteousness. He says that keeping the ordinances of the Lord was a helpful way in which to register an attitude toward new obedience. When he summoned the people to observe the Feast of Passover they came, even from the territory of the separated Northern Tribes. That religion thus followed is joyous was indicated when the people were eager for an added seven days of Passover observance.

From any base past there could be a resurrection. Isaiah often told of a bright future, by the grace of God. This was to come through a Suffering Servant, who would be their Redeemer. Therein there was a comfort in their present affliction. Jewry has always been the people charged with the care of the Book. Even the Bible is lost by disease. Hilkiah found the rolls amid the debris of the Temple and there was much to learn and practise by all who would listen when the words were read in public.

Jeremiah found the people engrossed in sin and in indifference to Jehovah. Regardless of consequences to himself he tried to dissuade from evil. Even when captivity was engulfing the nation he told how they could better the situation. A filthy pit was his reward for real national heroism.

Nebuchadnezzar was the instrument in completing the overthrow after Israel persisted in her idolatries and related sins. King Zedekiah, like all others who break their parole, had to face the consequences. Judgment does not indicate lessened interest. Jeremiah expresses the continuing feeling of Jehovah toward His Israel in the Golden Text: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee." 31:3.
