No definite agreement was reached with the council though it was promised that the city would do what it could to comply with the request.

In answering the ranchers as to what the city has done toward replacing water now taken from the creek W. E. Pruyn, city water supervisor, advised that the entire flow of Ditch creek has been diverted into Willow creek, and a check that he had made Monday revealed it to then have been flowing a stream of 75,000 gallons in 24 hours or about one-fourth of the total city water supply.

An information from Frederick D. Stricker, state health officer, that the city should take immediate steps to secure a safe, potable water supply was read. The information was given following the recent ex-amination of the local water supply having visited a fairyland. The big feature of the opening was the apby an engineer from Mr. Stricker's Tuesday to meet Mrs. Burgess who had just returned from an extended

Acting on this advice, as well as the request of the ranchers, the council in a body, accompanied by a well driller, made a trip of inves-tigation to the forks of Willow creek yesterday in an attempt to determine the feasibility of drilling for artesian water. The council was given the opinion of one well driller last fall that it was quite probable artesian water could be obtained in this vicinity, as the topographical situation is quite favorable.

W. L. McCaleb, county roadmas-ter, appeared before the council to out its improvement of the Willow creek road. He said the county road crew had now proceeded as far in both directions from its present camp as was possible, and before moving he wished to find out which way the city would rather have the crew move. The advice was asked be-cause of the $4000 of city money which was matched with a like amount from the county for the im provement of the road. The road is now graded from the Cleveland ranch to what is known as the "Butcher Bill" ranch. Mr. McCaleb suggested that it was more feasible proceed with the work on towards the forks of Willow creek as the ground there is in better shap to work at the present time. The lower end next to the city is rockies and can better be worked in wet weather. of the new crop will be handled through the Heppner houses. Lex-ington, it is certain, will handle anyway as much, while other points on the branch combined will take care of a like amount from yield reports of the different sections, making the total estimated county yield something in excess of a million and a half bushels, though it is not probable it will reach the 2,000,000 bushel mark.

It has been extremely difficult to estimate yields this season, declares C. W. Smith, county agent, as there has been a wide discrepancy in the production of lands that ordinarily production of lands that ordinarily yield much the same.
