School Days
"Golden Rule Days"

How proud Little Buddy or Little Betty would be of a fountain pen or pencil. A gold band or clip to them would make school days "golden rule days" indeed. A great help and time saver in writing lessons, too.

To the high school boy or girl these scholastic aids are indispensable. The new ones come in very attractive colors and are not expensive.

Aesop Said:
"Whatever you do, do with all your might"

The electrical industry has been following this advice since the day in 1882 when Edison placed in operation the first central station.

It is because it has always done everything with all its might that this country has 19,000,000 electrified homes and 500,000 electrified farms, an industrial system that has dignified labor by making the worker a director of power, and a standard of living that is the marvel of all the world.

It is because it has always done everything with all its might that service has been extended to more than 4,000 communities during the past five years.

It will continue to do everything with all its might until the United States has been as completely electrified as is practicable.
