NOT HEALTHY TO RETIRE!

THOMAS A. EDISON was recently asked whether he intended to retire. "No," he answered. "It's unhealthy."

These are wise words from a man of true wisdom. His inventions and discoveries have benefited the world for many years—at his advanced years many men would stop working and give themselves to rest and comfort, but he remains just as busy as ever.

He knows not only secrets of electricity, but also secrets of good living. He has learned that life is an experience glorious and vital—and that retirement means stagnation and death. His own splendid health and mental ability at an advanced age is a sterling example of what hard work can do for one.

ENROLL FOR MEN'S RIGHTS.

NOW there is a world organization called Aquitas, formed to fight for Men's Rights. It is housed in a fine old Vienna palace and its members are 25,000 suffering males who have been driven by the tyranny of femininity to join forces in the hope of preventing the further subjugation of men.

The Aquitas says that women have always ruled France, that women voters outnumber the men in England, and that the United States is completely under the domination of the ladies.

The Aquitas admits it does not want to reestablish the tyranny of the male. (Evidently that is considered a hopeless task.) The program of the Aquitas, if carried out, would make it impossible for women of means or women capable of self-support, or women who leave their husbands within three years of marriage, to get alimony. Divorced women would be denied the use of their husbands' names.

There are other purposes of this movement for Men's Rights. But it is a rather timid, milk-and-water movement. For example, many American men are in it. But they refuse to make their names public! They're afraid. And who wouldn't be?

The Hundred Days—Good Conduct—Advice

Fiction is a poor thing compared with facts. I suppose I know the story of the Siege of Troy, from having read a little of it, and hearing of it many years. It never interested me, its incidents seeming childish, specially that one of the river taking sides, and leaving its banks, at command of the gods, to inconvenience some of the combatants.

But I read of Napoleon, a real man, with absorbing interest. Every little while there is a new book about him, and I am not satisfied until I get hold of it. His life was crowded with incidents an ordinary man can in some measure understand.

His first wife had an impudent, troublesome, highly-bred and ugly little dog he hated; he was so frequently away from home on his big affairs that the dog did not know him, and it occasionally bit the conqueror. He tried to bribe a servant to get rid of the dog, but could not, with all his power.

I have heard all my life that when a man "amounts to something," his wife reverences and obeys him. Probably Napoleon amounted to more, considering everything, than any other man that ever lived, but both his wives were unfaithful, and made a specialty of nagging him.

To my mind the most remarkable incident in Napoleon's life was his return from Elba. He was a prisoner of the allied nations, after his disgrace at Waterloo. His own country was in hostile hands; his soldiers had turned against him. Yet he landed in France, almost alone, and marched toward Paris. As he encountered soldiers sent against him, he spoke to them, and they were converted to his cause; when he approached the gates of Paris, he had a vast army at his heels, and the king fled, taking his treasure with him, which the people on the other side of France captured to lay at the feet of this impudent, strangely powerful and lovable man.

He walked the steps of the king's palace, removed his travel-stained clothing, went to bed in security, and all asleep to the sweet sound of "Long Live Napoleon!" In all his omnipotence God never witnessed a stranger scene.

When good conduct does not pay, I do not urge it; indeed, I believe that when a man's conduct is not generally profitable, it is not good, and he should change it. The scheme of life contemplates a healthy, normal body, and in 95 per cent of births is natural inheritance. This entails food getting, shelter, association with pleasing creatures of our kind, and thus conduct is good or bad, we succeed or fail.

When most people talk, they are merely barking what others have said. The futility of good advice has often impressed me. . . . A gentleman in Michigan who has long made a business of giving advice about securing employment, and who has written extensively on the subject, writes to me to confess he is out of a job, and cannot find one. Somehow this old gentleman reminds me of a doctor who has spent all his life in advising others as to health, and is himself ill, and writing to others for advice.

Childhood Gems

One of the first "thrillers" of my youth was a story, wherein a boy of about my own size killed a ferocious giant with a small round pebble hurled from his sling. This giant was a double-dyed villain, and, needed killing. The boy became a king, and a hero; his name is, even yet, among the best known on earth. . . . My mother told me this story first; and she assured me of its absolute truth. I have never questioned it to this day. She told me God was with young David; that I must keep Him with me, so that giants could not harm me.

Another favorite was the story of an American boy, who thoughtlessly hacked down his father's prize cherry-tree; it, too, will stay with me always—just as true as when my mother read it to me. Its wonderful lesson, more potent for good than most of modern teaching—"I cannot tell a lie!" A liar is just a thief in other dress—and more to be despised. You can padlock me at the office of my attorney, S. E. Notson, in Heppner, Oregon, within six months from the date of the first publication of this notice, and date of first publication being the 5th day of September, 1929. SYLVIA CARON, Administratrix. 25-29

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for September 8. NEHEMIAH REBUILDS THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. Nehemiah 4:6, 15-21. Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

The cup-bearer to the king was not supposed to reflect any personal sorrows in his countenance. One day it was otherwise with Nehemiah as he appeared before Artaxerxes in one of the Babylonian palaces. "Why are you sad?" brought out a serious situation of the returned pilgrims who went forth on two expeditions to Jerusalem. It seems that Hanani, a relative of Nehemiah, had recently come from Judea and related how poorly affairs were going with the Jews in the rebuilding project. One serious fact was that the walls of the city were still broken down and there could be no seclusion for reconstruction or safety against the enemy as long as this was so.

The second question was a genuine surprise. "For what does thou request?" said the king. Nehemiah had his own eager desire but he had not framed it for presentation, but with quick uplift in prayer unto Jehovah he expressed his patriotic longing. He would be glad to be commissioned by Artaxerxes to lead a third expedition back to the land whence they had been taken captive. After quietly meeting leaders for three days Nehemiah planned a night ride about Jerusalem that he might make a thorough survey of the needs. Then he organized a real building program. The walls were divided into 44 sections and a designated group was appointed to build each part. Read Nehemiah 1-7 for the full context, and plenty of thrills will be found in the plots and the counter plots. Three men were named who tried to frustrate every project of Nehemiah. Behind them were the Samaritans and seven other peoples, all of whom made a coalition against the Jews. The opposition became still more aggressive when the walls were half up, possibly to a height of 100 feet. All sorts of arguments were presented to delay the building. One weapon was ridicule, as the enemy would come close to the walls and scoff at the workmen, declaring the walls could not keep out even a fox. Open letters were sent charging Nehemiah with various plots against Babylon. They tried to get him to attend a conference and his reply was "I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down." When they threatened his life friends advised that he seek refuge in the temple. Nehemiah boldly answered "Should such a man as I flee?"
