VOLTAIRE, A MASTER VIRTUE STAYING POWER

Frequently a reader encounters these two words: "Voltaire said." I always read what follows; sometimes I do not understand it, occasionally I disagree, but always I recognize a master mind and hand. Some will not read him; they have heard he was a mean and foolish little man. On the contrary, he was so unusual that he is still encouraging or distressing his fellow men.

If you read of Napoleon you soon note he had a good deal of respect for Voltaire. You have undoubtedly heard of Frederick the Great, who had the advantage of being a king to start with. Voltaire was a much smarter man; he has had far greater influence on the world. In spite of faults inevitable and natural in any human machine, Voltaire came nearer having intelligence than any other living organism.

I give him no credit; he simply had it. Instead of being born a pitiful fool, he was born with the world's greatest mind. Some of the famous prophets were weaklings compared to him; Mahomet's personal history convicts him frequently of being an ass—indeed, I know of no great mystic among rulers who had a really good mind. Voltaire won his fame as fairly as has evolution; every scholar has added him up, and given him great credit.

This long introduction to a quotation from Voltaire I just encountered in reading: "All men are equal; but it is not birth but virtue which makes them so."

In the gross sentimentalism of our conversation and reading the declaration that we are all equal is a favorite; but remember that a man really able to think says you are only equal to another if you have his virtues. And virtue is a simple word; it means a high average in the sort of conduct the world has decided is good. The dictionary gives some pages to the word virtue, but it all condenses into this; a high average in fairness, honesty, industry, temperance, usefulness in small or great ways, and thrift in health and business.

And the lowliest of us may profit from the practice of virtue.

I have received many letters in a single delivery of mail, and not one of real interest; but I received one today that caused me to take notice. "The heroics of human life," said the writer, "do not consist in spectacular circumstances; in great deeds, or in the taking of cities, but in the staying powers we have for the monotony of little things that make up the long hard siege of living and behaving creditably." This, it seems to me, is wise; had I encountered it in Emerson or Aristotle, I should have been moved no more than I was by this utterance of one of the plain people of 1929.

Mr. Cash Will Attend Convention at Portland

J. D. Cash, manager of the local J. C. Penney Co. store, will leave Sunday morning for Portland to attend the fall convention of the J. C. Penney company to be held at Multnomah hotel, opening on Monday and continuing throughout the week.

Representatives from the New York office of the company who will be present at the convention and preside over the general sessions, will include Chairman W. M. Bushnell, personnel department; W. A. Reynolds, sales department; E. A. Ross, real estate department; E. G. Ruffner, district manager. Seven buyers for important merchandise departments will also be present.

The Portland convention is one of 15 district meetings held at central points throughout the country and attended by over 1400 J. C. Penney company store managers. "The fall convention this year," states Mr. Cash, "will be largely devoted to sales promotion in line with the Gold Star sales contest recently inaugurated by the company. This contest is not only to increase sales but to improve service to the public by bringing individual clerks in closer contact with the entire organization, thus giving them a better understanding of efficient selling methods. This year has already seen the greatest growth ever made in the development of the J. C. Penney company. More stores have been opened than in any previous year, and sales are larger than ever before."

Mr. Cash states that four days of the convention will be given over to conferences with individual members of the convention committees and to buying.

HOME POINTERS

(From School of Home Economics.) An ideal fruit jelly has a bright or delicate color, is nearly transparent, and has no scum or bubbles at the top. Such a jelly, when turned out of its container, will hold its shape, is tender, and quivers when moved. It will cut easily with a spoon, yet breaks with a sharp cleavage line and shows sparkling surfaces.

Milk is far richer in calcium, a mineral which growing children need for bones and teeth, than almost any other food. Skim milk, while it contains practically all the protein, sugar and mineral matter of whole milk, is lacking in butterfat, which contains a vitamin essential to the welfare of the children.

While sugar itself is a desirable part of the child's diet, it is harmful if fed in large quantities or between meals. Sweets, if given to children between meals or during the first course of the meal, will spoil the appetite for other essential foods. The proper time to serve sweets is at the end of a meal.

paperly outer covering on the lamb carcass—should be removed before cooking, it is now believed that the flavor of the lamb is not affected by the fell. Leg of lamb keeps its shape better if cooked with the fell, but shoulder, saddle and chops cook better without it.

There is no advantage in feeding pigs an excessive amount of skim milk and cutting down on the grain ration, as the animal will not make economical gains on such a diet, reports the Oregon Experiment station. A pig weighing 70 pounds requires about seven pounds of skim milk and four and a half pounds of corn daily to make the most satisfactory gains.

Legume hays are considerably higher in protein content than are hays from cereals and grasses, and consequently the most economical kinds to grow for a dairy herd. Cereal concentrates to feed with legume hays are about half as expensive to supply as protein concentrates, finds the experiment station.

IRRIGON

School started last week with quite an increase in enrollment in the high school here, necessitating the hiring of another teacher, Miss Marie Hoover of Inverness, Mont. Miss Rachel Sloan is the new primary teacher, Mrs. Grieves of Seattle, Intermediate, and Mrs. S. Barker the grammar room, with R. J. Hoisington of Wasco, Idaho, as superintendent.

Mr. Hoisington announced recently that the band composed of school students will play in Heppner Friday and Saturday, September 27-28 at the Rodeo, and as a consequence they are practicing every night at the high school building under their new director.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Caldwell spent the week end with friends in The Dalles.

Mrs. Fred Markham with her new daughter returned home Saturday from the Hermiston hospital. Miss Lottie Haskell who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs.

U. O. Artist Deplots Spirit of Paul Bunyan

EUGENE, Or.—The great Northwest, land of loggers, has its own mythology as absorbing and thrilling as that of ancient Greece or those countries of the Norseland. This mythology centers around the famed Paul Bunyan and his great blue ox. Tales of the prowess of the Herculean Paul and of the great strength of the ox are told around bunk house fires at night, the sturdy loggers vying with each other in inventing new "whoppers."

But so far the great Paul has lacked an artist to memorialize him, to put him into everlasting stone or paint him on enduring canvas. Making a bid for this honor is Oliver Laurence Barrett, sculptor of the University of Oregon, who has just completed a working model of Paul and his great ox.

This model Mr. Barrett hopes some day to see in stone in gigantic size, perhaps 20 feet high. Paul is depicted kneeling at the head of his ox, as if in contemplation of some great deed such as the digging of Puget Sound or the carving of the great Columbia gorge. The ox stands ready, patient at his side. The whole is mounted on a pedestal base, which in turn is flanked by circular saws, their teeth making a symbolic pattern on either side.

Into the clay model Mr. Barrett has put the very spirit of the western woods. The massive strength, the majesty and the solidity of the trees and mountains are faithfully brought out in the carving.

It is the hope of Mr. Barrett that the statue may some day become the symbol of the Northwest basic industry, lumber, and that its replica in towering size may be placed in some prominent place as a fitting memorial for this spirit that is so familiar and so loved by all lumbermen.

Mr. Barrett, one of the younger artists of the West, is already achieving fame as an interpreter of the early Oregon country days. At a recent exhibition in San Francisco his work won warm praise from art critics. Notable western figures he has made include "Sandstorm," a statue of a cowboy and his horse battling a storm, which stands in the Legion of Honor palace at San Francisco; "The Indian," a tribute to the red man, and a striking group depicting the last stand of the wild horse. Among his other works is a highly artistic heroic depiction of "St. George and the Dragon."

The artist is thoroughly familiar with the lumber industry of the Northwest, and in his early youth was employed in various mills and logging camps. In these he heard the Bunyan tales and as soon as he became an artist resolved to make them one of his themes for interpretation.

George Haskell the past two weeks returned to her position in The Dalles.

Miss Dorothy Isom left Sunday for the normal school at Cheney, Wash., accompanied by her mother Mrs. W. C. Isom.

Mrs. Joe Lieuallen of Heppner spent Monday and Tuesday at the W. C. Isom home.

The marriage of Harry Smith and Mrs. Mary Markham was solemnized on Tuesday of last week. Both are residents of Irrigon and the community unites in wishing them health, happiness and prosperity in their married life.

Miss Catherine Olday of Portland is spending the week with Miss Joyce Caldwell.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Alquist moved to their new home at Umatilla Friday. Mrs. Alquist will continue services every Sunday at the regular hour.

mother, Mrs. Laxton McMurray, and his friend, Clarence Linn, motored to Pendleton Monday. Mr. Page went to have dental work done by Dr. Fred Farrior. The party attended a show in the evening and at midnight Mr. Page took the train for Iowa City where he goes to continue his graduate work in the University of Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram West and two children from Silcott, Wash., arrived Sunday and visited briefly with relatives here before continuing their journey to the coast. Mrs. West's mother, Mrs. Emily McMurray, who had been spending several weeks in Washington and Idaho, came home with them.

Mrs. Alice Wiles had as her dinner guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Dale Ray, Claud and Gladys Bra-shers, her son Teble Wiles, and her daughter, Mrs. Ned Carr, who was the honor guest. The occasion was in celebration of Mrs. Carr's birthday.

Cleo Drake has purchased from Mrs. Pearl Snively Jr. of Richmond, Wash., the house on Third street known as the Grandma Hale property. Mr. and Mrs. Drake will move in soon.

Mrs. Ernest Shipley visited last week with her parents in Lostine. Mr. and Mrs. Clair Calkins have moved to Hermiston to make their home. They made this change that they might have their small son in the Adventist school which has been opened in that city. They went Sunday and were accompanied by Mrs. George Frank who went to visit her daughter Hazel, a student in the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Helms are the proud parents of an eleven pound daughter born Monday morning, Sept. 16, in the Heppner hospital.

Mrs. Esper Hansen of Portland arrived Tuesday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Engelman. She was met in Arlington by her sister, Fern Engelman, and her cousin, George Newton.

Frank Engelman is quite ill. T. H. Wilson of Portland is enjoying the renewal of old time acquaintances here. He states that one is a much better looking town now than it was 22 years ago when he resided in our city and operated a barber shop. Mr. Wilson is now engaged in the real estate business.

Mrs. William Sexton returned last Saturday after an absence of three weeks.

Earl Murray was here Monday from Walla Walla delivering a load of prunes.

Many from here attended the D. C. Duvall sale Tuesday.

Work on the organization of a school band or orchestra has started. C. M. Daniels, high school instructor, will be the leader.

Mrs. Sam Warfield whose home is in Peck, Idaho, is here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cochran.

The members of the civics class of the high school have organized a Civic Social Club. The constitution drafted by Margaret Crawford and Mildred Smith has been adopted and election of officers will be held Thursday. The club will hold its meetings the first and third Monday of each month. They contemplate giving a play in the near future.
