

Local Happenings

Jay Hiatt and family just recently returned from a visit with relatives at Castle Rock and Vancouver, Wash. At Christmas time they drove to Portland, taking down the final shipment for the season of turkeys to the holiday market, and Mr. Hiatt states that he did well and realized a fine price for the birds. At Castle Rock they visited with Mrs. Hiatt's mother and at Vancouver with the parents of Mr. Hiatt. On the return trip home Mr. Hiatt brought along a registered Jersey bull calf to add to his herd. He is also getting in a couple of bronze turkey toms, the two birds setting him back to the tune of about $60. There is some compensation for this expense, however, in the fact that Mr. Hiatt has sold a number of fine toms from his own flocks here, during the season, this week shipping a bird to Woodland, Wash. Out his way the weather has been somewhat colder than in town, and the thermometer reached the low point on Monday night, dropping down to 12 degrees below when it was three below at Heppner.

T. J. Humphreys, local druggist burned his mouth and throat when he applied too much suction to the tube being used to syphon denatured alcohol, Friday afternoon. The burns received were painful, but Humphreys is making rapid recovery from the accident.

L. D. Neill was a visitor in the city on Tuesday from his home on Big Butter creek above Pine City. Plenty of winter weather out his way, but no snow to speak of. Stockmen up and down the creek are very busy feeding.

W. P. Mahoney, president, and Garnet Barzatt, second vice president, of the Oregon Woolgrowers association, attended the meeting of the Washington Woolgrowers association at Walla Walla, Wash., the first of this week.

Theodore Anderson states that the winter is quite genuine out Eight Mile way, but as yet not as much snow as he would like. He was looking after business here on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Mulligan, who live about 24 miles beyond Hardman, when in town Saturday reported the snow there about the same depth as in Heppner.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Turner, when in Heppner Saturday, reported their baby much improved in health, but still suffering some from a slight cold.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ekleberry of Morgan were visitors in Heppner Friday, Mrs. Ekleberry having come to town to receive dental attention.

Percy Jarmon of Butter creek was in Heppner on business Saturday. He says that he is being kept busy feeding his stock these days.

Tilman Hogue, in Heppner from his wheat ranch at Gooseberry, reports the wheat looking much better than at this time last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vaughn and Miss Ona Gilliam returned Friday evening from Portland after a visit of a few days there.

Adolf Skoubo of Boardman was in Heppner Saturday attending to business at the Morrow county court house.

Women in charge of the Episcopal auxiliary food sale at Hughes store Saturday reported it a success.

FARM POINTERS.

Harness that is kept clean and well oiled lasts longer and is less apt to cause sores on horses.

A good farmer, like a good checker player, plans his moves in advance. In this respect, a good record book is a great help to the farmer. They may be obtained from the farm management department of Oregon State college.

Dairymen have found that a cow that has inherited high producing ability can be held back by poor feed and care, but a cow with a low-producing inheritance cannot exceed it, even under most favorable conditions, says the Oregon Experiment station.

The so-called bumblefoot of chickens is usually caused by some injury to the foot, such as a bruise or a break in the skin caused by a nail, wire or other object. Infection develops, and the foot swells. Treatment requires considerable time and attention, and is seldom practiced unless the fowl is valuable. Details of the procedure may be obtained from the poultry department of Oregon State college.

In July, 1923, only 17 of the 3073 counties in the United States were free from bovine tuberculosis. On December 20, 1929, 839 of these counties were on the free list.

Cow testing associations in India, if there are any, would have hard sledding in view of the religious antipathy the Hindus have for harming a cow in any way. No matter how poor a cow may be, she is assured of life and liberty until she dies a natural death, says W. A. Hayes, Oregon State college graduate, who has just returned after seven years' service as an agricultural specialist in India.

O. S. C. GETS AUTO SPECIALIST. A new specialist in auto mechanics, R. N. Lunde, has been added to the agricultural engineering staff at Oregon State college and will be in charge of that phase of the coming power farming short course January 6 to 18. Mr. Lunde is a graduate in mechanical engineering at O. S. C. who has spent several years since working in the eastern states and later in Oregon.

KNOBLOCK LEADS WITH LARGE BAG

Morrow County Man Leads State With Predatory Animal Bag For December and 1929.

To Adam J. Knoblock, Morrow county hunter, with the predatory animal control, goes the credit for killing more predatory animals during 1929 than any other hunter engaged in the work. He bagged 361 coyotes and five bobcats for a total of 366 animals. Knoblock also heads the list for December, having killed 27 coyotes. Knoblock, who killed 1367 predatory animals in Oregon since his connection with the predatory animal control, is one of the seven men engaged in the work that has killed more than 1000 animals in Oregon, according to Stanley G. Jewett, leader.

During December 34 hunters worked a total of 923 days and took 165 coyotes, 21 bobcats, one stock-killing bear, a total of 188 predatory animals. In addition, 7 badgers, 1 housecat, 87 porcupines and two skunks were taken in traps placed for coyotes.

During the month, 106 horses, 5 cows and 20 head of sheep were used for establishing new poison stations. Some hunters recovered a considerable number of poisoned animals, while others did not turn in a very great number. The results of the work at this time of year will show up during lambing time far more than at present. Therefore, it is up to each and every hunter on the job to so conduct his work that he will have a clear conscience when livestock again goes on the open range. This office believes each hunter did his best, Mr. Jewett's report declares.

During the calendar year 1929, 4,025 coyotes, 375 bobcats, 9 cougars, 1 timber wolf and 38 sheep-killing bears were turned in to Jewett's office. In addition to these only 75 fur-bearing animals, such as skunks and badgers, were turned in. This makes a total of 4,521 animals actually received at the Portland office and does not take into consideration a large number poisoned by regular hunters and stockmen co-operating. An average of only 25 men worked full time during the year. This is just about half enough men to properly handle the work in this state.

The above does not tell all the story, as a considerable number of coyotes was poisoned of which no record was possible and some of the hunters whose names do not appear on the list were working in such localities or under such conditions that it was impossible to get any great number of animals. This is notably true of every hunter working in the western part of the state. However, during the short period worked by Elmer Miller in Curry county, he was successful in turning in to the office 6 cougars, 7 bears, 9 bobcats and one coyote.

DO YOU KNOW?

From School of Home Economics, O.S.C. That the difference in texture between bread or muffins and cake is largely due to the difference in the amount of sugar used.

That a large amount of sugar, with the proper balance of other ingredients, gives a fine texture to flour, sugar and fat mixtures.

That egg stains can be removed from silver spoons by sprinkling with soda before washing them.

That bacon fat, used in muffins, gives a delicious flavor. Cooked bacon, rather finely chopped, may also be mixed in the batter.

Amateurs Will Battle In Boxing Tournament

Portland, Ore., Jan. 14.—(Special.)—When the bell sounds for the first preliminary rounds of the Pacific Coast amateur boxing championships to be staged by the Multnomah Amateur Athletic club at the Civic auditorium, Friday night, February 28, it is the hope of James J. Richardson, chairman of boxing for the Amateur Athletic union, that at least 50 per cent of the entrants are inexperienced boxers.

"The bouts are limited to three rounds each and no boy will have to box more than twice each night during the two nights of the championships," said Richardson. "There is more action for spectators when the boys go at top speed and know they will only have to box three rounds. I expect a large entry list from the young boxers throughout the northwest. We will pay the expenses of any boxer from outside of Portland who makes a creditable showing. Those who get into the finals and win or make a good showing will be sent to Boston for the national championships."
