

WOOL MART DATA HERE FOR GROWER

Prominent Part is Played By Oregon in Wool Market Advances.

Pendleton, Ore., Feb. 25.—Complete information on the program of the National Wool Marketing corporation, sponsored by the Federal Farm board to give wool producers greater control in the marketing of their commodity, which they have sought for the last quarter of a century, has been received in the offices of the Oregon Wool Growers association, announces Walter A. Holt, secretary. The Oregon association now has available data on the new wool plan, copies of the marketing agreements, and such other materials as growers who are studying the Federal Farm board program for wool may desire.

In the national wool selling plan, Oregon is in District 1. Other states in this district include Washington, Idaho, California and Nevada. This area, which produced a total of 67,844,000 pounds of wool in 1929, will have four directors, the same number it now has on the temporary directorate of the corporation. The present directors of the district are R. A. Ward, manager of the Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers, Portland; J. H. Peterson, president of the California Wool Growers association; F. R. Marshall, secretary of the National Wool Growers association, whose sheep holdings are near Prosser, Wash., and F. J. Hagenbarth, Idaho, president of the National Wool Growers association and chairman of the wool and mohair advisory committee to the farm board.

Oregon has played an important part in the development of cooperative wool marketing in the west. The Pacific Cooperative, which recently announced its affiliation with the national corporation, has been the country's largest grower-controlled wool concern, handling approximately 5,000,000 pounds annually. As a unit in the national program Mr. Ward anticipates the Pacific will handle 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 pounds of wool this year.

As Oregon's 1929 clip was 18,849,000 pounds, coming from 2,476,000 sheep, giving the state sixth place among the wool states, the national corporation expects to obtain a considerable poundage of wool from this state. Oregon's wool production has been mounting since 1920, the last clip being 1,451,000 pounds more than the 1920 clip. Oregon's sheep population at the beginning of 1930 was 2,501,000 head, reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture, a slight increase over the count for January 1, 1929.

The wool marketing machinery established on a nation-wide basis by the Federal Farm board, explains Byron Wilson, secretary-treasurer of the national corporation, is to carry to the wool growing industry the purposes of the Agricultural Marketing act of 1929. The two principal aims are to eliminate ruinous speculation from the field of competitive wool marketing, and to organize producers to handle the marketing of their commodity. If the corporation attracts 100,000,000 pounds of wool this year, and reports from the national organization's headquarters indicate that such a volume is not impossible, it will have enough to be a strong factor. The farm board estimates that control of 20 to 25 percent of the domestic production of any commodity is sufficient to exert a strong market stabilization influence. A 1930 volume of 100,000,000 pounds would give the corporation approximately one-third of the national clip to start out its program of establishing orderly marketing in the wool industry.

Mr. Wilson advises the Oregon association officers that finances have been arranged for and that the national corporation is ready to do business. C. T. Thomson, field representative for the wool corporation, is now in the west. Mr. Thomson has spent some time in Oregon visiting with state leaders in the corporation movement, outlining the organization details and what producers must do to participate in the new wool selling program.

BUTTER SALES STUDIED.

Inspectors of the department of agriculture of the state of Iowa recently made a survey to ascertain the extent to which oleomargarine and other substitutes are taking the place of butter among consumers and the report declares that in 401 stores of nine counties of the state 56 per cent of the people use butter and 44 per cent use oleo. Considering the farmers separately they find about the same ratio. A newspaper item noted a few days ago recited the case of a woman from a farm selling a package of her butter to a grocery store and buying five pounds of oleo to take home with her, but this particular case was not in Oregon. The practice is hardly conducive to dairy prosperity, says a report from the state market agent. Possibly it is not general in this state.

ESSAYS SUBMITTED.

More than 200 essays on temperance were written by the students of the Heppner high and grade schools for the contest being sponsored by the local chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Teachers of the various grades selected the best submitted by their grades and have turned them in for the competition. Essays, numbering 53, will compete in six divisions, according to grade, for first and second cash prizes. Judges have begun the task of selecting the prize compositions.

GARDEN HINTS BROADCAST.

Listening in on telephone gossip about seasonal garden topics is one of the newly acquired privileges of KOAC's radio audience each Thursday afternoon at 3:50 o'clock. At least such is the effect when a talkative woman known to her friends as "Mrs. Winter" picks up the receiver and, while apparently chatting with one of her neighbors, broadcasts to gardeners everywhere a number of practical pointers on such garden practices as have a seasonal appeal. These garden tips which "Mrs. Winter" obtains from Andrew Laing, campus landscape gardening foreman at Oregon State college, are included in the home garden programs which occupy the half hour between 3:30 and 4 o'clock each Thursday afternoon.

SNOW COVERS GROUND.

Several inches of snow fell in Heppner and Morrow county Tuesday night. The snow was wet and slushy and it is expected that it will improve crops in general.

MISSION UNION TO MEET.

The Union Missionary society has announced a meeting for Friday afternoon, March 7, at the Episcopal church.

Birds are often a big factor in controlling many common insect pests, and wise farmers protect them.

Disturbances of bees during the winter may excite them and cause a rise in the temperature within the hive, resulting in premature brood rearing, which is highly undesirable, says the Oregon Experiment station. The entrance of the hive may be kept open by dragging the dead bees out with a short wire.

The winning of the "President's Cup" for 1929 by The Lion's Lila, highest honor attainable by a Jersey breeder, to Oregon for the third time since its institution in 1921, and to Independence for the second time during the period. As a Senior-3, Class AAA, she produced 926.55 pounds fat. She has broken two world records, qualified for two medals of merit and two silver medals, all before reaching five years of age.

Before expending any time or energy in putting the raspberry patch into shape, it is wise to be sure that the canes are free from insects and diseases, a fact which can be determined only by careful examination, says the Oregon Experiment station. If they are seriously infested, the best thing to do is to plow up the planting and replace it with new stock, or do a minimum amount of work on the old patch for the season.

POSTURE EFFECT TOLD.

COOPERATION NEEDED.

Reasoning from a recent talk by ex-Governor McKelvie of Nebraska, now a member of the Federal Farm board, on the necessity for cooperation among farmers, The Dailies Optimist says: "The time has arrived when agriculture must recognize the hugeness of the part it plays and how vitally it affects all other industry of the nation. The agricultural industry is basic, but it must not lie still and unprogressive. Those who administer it, from the owner of the smallest farm on up to those who have been selected to represent it in the circles where the profoundest thought of those who have the best interests of the entire nation at heart will be expended, must realize the need for evolution and the ultimate benefits to be derived."

J. H. CAMPBELL DEAD.

The speakers are scheduled to begin at 7:40 o'clock.

FASHION POINTERS.

(From School of Home Economics, Oregon State college.)

Accessories this year are as important a part of the costume as the dress itself.

Colors for spring are varied, none outstanding. Black is supreme, usually leading the list in the smart woman's wardrobe. Dead white is very good alone or combined with black. Pastels are all good, with rose leading. Greens are increasing. In all shades, as are reds and blues. Beiges, with rosy, rusty or yellow tones, are smart.

Gloves are much longer than formerly and the classic slip-on is outstanding for all occasions. For evening, 24 button length gloves may be worn if one wishes.

Albert Williams is reported to be confined to his home with a critical case of illness.

With a Thor you acquire more than a machine that will both wash and iron your clothes. You own a machine that will do the job as well years hence as it does right now! Many Thors we sold 15 years ago are doing as much, and we have every reason to suppose that this new improved Thor will do even more. Every part bespeaks lasting quality. The ripple-green, seamless, porcelain tub, the aluminum agitator that quickly and gently gets all the dirt from clothes without extra soaping or soaking. The enclosed, dependable motor.

Then, slip off the wringer, slip on the ironer—and you have a machine to do your most irksome task. The Thor ironer presses flatwork quickly and smoothly. Has entirely open end for shirts, dresses, underthings. It is as simple to operate as your electric sweeper. See this machine today. March 8 is the last day of these special terms and low Thor prices.
