Snow Recalls Coon Hunt Of Olcott and Steiner

Under the above caption, the Salem Capital Journal of a January date recites a reminiscence having to do with a coon hunt a few years ago when the conditions as to snow were similar to the past winter. This little story involves one of Morrow county's citizens, and we give it as the Journal printed the incident, it being illustrative of the fact you can't always tell what a man might do by his looks:

"It was a day just like this some years ago," said Cuyler Van Patten to Kenneth Brown, looking out of a window at the snow, "yes it was just such a day as this when Ben Olcott, then governor, Dr. Lee Steiner, Rolla Southwick and Dwight Misner had their famous coon hunt."

"What?" said Cuyler to an outsider. "Never heard of the famous Olcott-Steiner coon hunt? Well, you know we have a lot of coons around here which come out and cavort whenever there is snow and the former governor and Doc Steiner are great coon hunters. So was Dwight Misner. You remember him, used to run a garage here.

"Well Misner went out one day and shot a coon. Instead of taking it home he laid it sort of natural like in the crotch of a tree well up and suggested to Olcott and Steiner the next day that they go on a coon hunt. Rolla Southwick went along. Misner steered the boys around to within good range of the dead coon, spotted him and turned him over to the other boys for a target. They all three blazed away at once. The coon I guess was killed any way eight times before it was declared officially dead.

"Then Misner told them about it. Maybe that's why Misner left town a while after. I don't know."

THINK OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE IN TERMS OF TOMORROW

Ultimate cost is as important as first cost in the purchase of an automobile

WHEN you purchase an automobile you are making an investment of a considerable amount of money. It is essential, therefore, that you give careful thought to the best selection and know what you are getting for your automobile dollars.

The first cost is important because it may mean an immediate, satisfactory saving. Of equal importance is the ultimate cost after thousands of miles of service. This ultimate cost is the true measure of automobile value.

The first cost of the new Ford is unusually low not only because of economies in manufacturing, but because the same principles that inspire these savings are extended to every other step that means greater service to the public. It is easy to see that economies in production would be of little value if they were sacrificed later through high charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories.

The Ford dealer, therefore, does business on the same low-profit margin as the Ford Motor Company. His discount or commission is twenty-five to fifty per cent lower than that of any other automobile dealer. You gain because he makes a small profit on many sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales.

The difference in selling cost, combined with the low charges for financing and accessories, amounts to at least $50 to $75 on each car. This is as important as economies in production in keeping down the price you pay for the new Ford.

The low ultimate cost of the new Ford is the result of sound design, quality of material and unusual care in manufacturing. Friction and wear are reduced by the accuracy with which each part is made and assembled.

These factors combine to decrease the cost of operation and add months and years to the useful life of the car. The good performance and low yearly depreciation of the new Ford are indicative of the enduring quality built into it at the factory.

SERVICE charges are on the same fair, economical basis as the making and selling of the car and replacement parts are always available at low prices through all Ford dealers. In two, three or five years, depending on how much you drive, the saving in operating and maintaining a new Ford will amount to even more than the saving on the first cost.

Think in terms of tomorrow, therefore, when you purchase an automobile. For tomorrow will reveal its true worth.
