HIGH WAGES REDUCE COSTS.

ONE of the amazing discoveries which has been made in industry in America is that the higher the wages the less the cost per unit of production.

There must be some magic in the air of America, Europeans believed, when they heard of American wage-earners owning automobiles and radios, having bathtubs in their homes, keeping their children in school clear through high school, and having scores of other luxuries which were forever beyond the reach of the worker in the Old World.

They are beginning to learn that there isn't any magic about it. Sir Percival Perry, chairman of the Ford Motor company, limited, which controls all of the European Ford companies, has just issued a report in which he shows that the European worker can do just as much as the American and do it just as cheaply, provided he is paid proportionately as high wages and given as efficient equipment with which to work.

"We are employing Englishmen, Irishmen, Dutchmen, Frenchmen, Belgians, Danes, Germans, Italians, Spaniards, Swedes, Finns and Turks," says Sir Percival, "working in their own countries but doing the same job with similar tools under equal factory conditions. We compare how long it takes each respective man to complete his work."

And what they found out was this. The highest wages are paid in the Danish factory, and there the cost per unit of production was lowest. The lowest wages were paid the Belgian factory, and there the cost per unit was highest.

The comparison was exact, for the same things were being made under the same conditions, except in that matter of wages. They raised the wages in the Belgian factory and instantly production costs dropped.

That sort of demonstration is going to revolutionize industry all over the world. The old theory that labor was a commodity to be bought in the cheapest market has been pretty well exploded in the United States for a decade. Now the rest of the world is learning our secret. That won't hurt us, but will help everybody. Anything which increases the buying power of any people is of benefit to all the other people who have goods to sell. And prosperity depends upon the interchange of commodities.

LETTING OFF STEAM.

EVERY human being has a right to say what he thinks, and so long as in saying it he does not directly incite others to crime or offend public decency, nobody has a right to stop him from speaking his mind.

That is the sum and substance of our Constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech. There is hardly a person living who does not at times yearn for the opportunity to "let off steam" by expressing his opinion of the way the world is run, and of some of the people who have a hand in running it.

A good many people are fanatics on the subject of speaking their mind. They love to attract attention to themselves, and to abuse those in authority. When officials try to suppress them, these vociferous ones are happy. It proves that the world is all wrong. They immediately become, in their own minds and the minds of others like them, martyrs to the cause of free speech.

There is only one intelligent way to handle such people. That is to let them talk preserve order in the crowd that is listening to them, and pay no attention to what they say. And that is the way in which the Communist demonstrations early in March were handled in most American cities and elsewhere in the world.

That didn't suit the Communists. There is no glory in being allowed to talk. What they want is to be prevented from talking. That gives them a high degree of satisfaction and gives color to their claim that free speech is not allowed in this country. So when they found, in New York, Chicago and elsewhere, that they were not going to be interfered with, they began to throw things at the police in the effort to provoke retaliation to which they could point as evidence of oppression.

Talking hurts nobody unless the effort is made to suppress it. Like dynamite, these agitators are dangerous only when confined. Give them a chance to let off steam by talking their heads off, if they want to, and the rest of the world will go about its business without bothering with them. Try to squelch them and a good many honest but stupid people will begin to wonder whether or after all there isn't something in their claim that they are being persecuted. And that is the impression they are trying to convey.

Uncle Si Tinklepaugh says he don't mind people tellin' lies about him but if they ever start tellin' the truth it's goin' to make him pretty sore.

That New York author who has moved to France because he says America isn't a fit place to live in since prohibition can be added to the list of people who never will be missed.

IRRIGON

E. Acock made a business trip to Hermiston Monday.

Mrs. James Wirner visited at the W. C. Isom home Tuesday afternoon.

Kenneth Alquist has been absent from school the last five days with an attack of flu.

Those from the high school who motored to Boardman Friday night for the try-out in the declamatory contest were Verdie Leach, dramatic; Vallis Dexter, oratorical; and Wilbur Stever, humorous. Irrigon was not so fortunate this year as last when we had two winners of first prizes and one second. Alpine carried off all the honors this year.

Ralph Benefield went to Vale Wednesday to work for some time.

Mrs. Leola Beavert was Boardman visitor Wednesday evening.
