Sam McDaniel was in town on Saturday from his home in the Hardman section. He has resided near the timber line south of Hardman for many years, and he reports this past winter to be the shortest on precipitation in his experience. The water courses are now low for the spring season and there is no reserve of snow to keep them up. The prospect for a water shortage this coming summer is apparent from the present outlook, and it is to be hoped that the lack will be supplied by abundant and seasonable showers.

Walter Bray, who is at present with the Tuttle and Price shearing outfit, states that Irrigon strawberries will be on the market in about ten days, and the crop will be quite abundant. The fruit seems to be coming along extra well this season. Mr. Bray also states that on his place he will have about a 50 percent normal apricot and peach crop this season from present indications, his orchards having come through the winter freeze in fair shape.

Cliff Merrill of Monument, who is now running a freight truck between that point and Heppner, delivered 39 cans of cream to Morrow County creamery on Tuesday, gathered from the Monument, Kimberley and Kaylor basin sections. That crows and magpies are pretty numerous on Rhea creek, and that they do a lot of damage to the oncoming crop of pheasants, is the statement of Grant Olden, who was in town a short time Wednesday. He thinks that many nests along the creek in his vicinity could be found now and the eggs destroyed, and the nestlings of the chinas could be preserved later on. This is something for the boys to look into.

Ray Baker, who has been employed in Richard Wells' barber shop, left Monday for Baker where he will follow his trade, and also play first base on the baseball team in that city, with which he played last season. The vacancy left by his departure has been filled by Ray Harrison of Chicago, Ill.
