

When's the Time to Marry?

I once did my very best to prevent a marriage. It was immediately after the war. The young man came out of the army without a job. He owed me some money, which was incidental. I would gladly have loaned him more to get a start in business, but when he asked for a loan to finance his marriage, I refused.

Carefully on his guard, he looked over the whole feminine sex for years.

Thus insured with wealth and wisdom, he proceeded at the age of forty-seven to pick himself a foolish and empty headed little girl. Already the marriage shows signs of strain; it surely cannot last.

Earnest articles are written about the necessity for making marriage difficult. Young people should be compelled to wait, they say, until they have funds and experience.

It seems a sound argument, and yet such restrictions would have prevented the marriage of Thomas Lincoln and the birth of Abraham. They would have kept penniless Hawthorne from contracting one of the finest marriages of literary history. They would probably have postponed, if not prevented, most of the happiest unions that have taken place since the beginning of the world.

So having been a watcher of weddings for many years, I find myself less impressed with the judgment of maturity and more confident of the impulses of youth.

For what is mature judgment, anyway, but the total of our disappointments and worries, our buried fingers and our fears?

Maturity has judgment which is the wisdom of age, but youth has instinct which is the wisdom of the ages.

TUNNEL

The committee appointed by the British Government to investigate the feasibility of a tunnel under the English channel connecting England with France, has reported in favor of the project. It seems to Americans such a simple and desirable engineering job that we wonder why it has not been done long ago, but there are plenty of "diehards" in England who fear that such a tunnel would make it easier for an enemy to invade the British Isles.

They are deaf to the obvious answers that all that would be necessary to stop a French army would be to let the water into the tunnel. The British Channel, from Dover to Calais is about twenty miles across, measured directly north and south. The shallow waters of the channel are easily stirred up by winds and the crossing is one of the roughest in the world. Under the water is a bed of solid chalk, miles deep, through which a tunnel could easily be bored for electric trains. It would cost about $3,000,000 the committee estimates, and take eight years. The French Government is friendly to the project. When done, England would no longer be in a position where an enemy's ships could cut off her food supply, unless that enemy happened to be France.

POLICE

One of the reasons why criminals are caught more speedily in England than in America is that England has a single police force for the entire country and in the United States we have as many different police departments as we have towns, each operating under a different system and with no coordination between them except in rare instances.

The commonwealth of Pennsylvania has made a start toward remedying this. A network of telephone wires connecting every important town in the state with all the rest, and with four main centers of operation, operates a type-writer-telegraph system in every police headquarters. The moment a crime is discovered anywhere, all the facts and possible clues to the criminal are printed in the office of every chief of police and the whole criminal-catching machinery of the commonwealth is set in motion.

AGE

"A woman is as old as she looks and a man is as old as he feels," runs an ancient proverb. Many men of eighty or more are capable of doing as much work and with as much enthusiasm as most men of forty; many more men are old and past their usefulness at sixty. The difference, recent scientific research has discovered, lies in the secretions of certain glands of the body. When these diminish such as supervene, Dr. Harry Benjamin of New York, working in association with Dr. Casimir Funk, discoverer of vitamins, and Dr. Benjamin Harrow of the College of the City of New York, has found a way of introducing the hormones, or essential secretions of these glands, into elderly men, with surprising results. The effect is not to prolong life, in all probability, but to enable a man to retain his youthful energy through a period many years longer than the average.

So far this is experimental, but the experiments have been successful, and the time may be close at hand when old age and helplessness will no longer be synonymous.

RUST

One of the greatest enemies of progress is rust. For years the iron and steel industries have spent hundreds of thousands a year in research into means of preventing the rust that destroys bridges, factories, machinery, everything made of iron. Protecting metals against rust is an expensive part of all kinds of construction and manufacturing processes.

So called "stainless" steel is providing one answer. Instead of protecting the surface, certain other metals are alloyed with the steel and the metal becomes rustless, capable of taking and keeping a brilliant polish. Cheaper than nickel plate, more durable than chromium plate, one automobile manufacturer is already turning out cars whose bright parts are of stainless steel, and now other makers are considering entire bodies and chassis of the same metal. If this works out our roads may become as glittering as they were when everybody rode nickel-plated bicycles.

Fruit Sauce

Whip a cup of cream solid and fold into it half a cup of fresh or preserved fruit rubbed through a sieve and sweetened to taste. Jam, marmalade, or jelly may be used instead of the fruit, and the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs may be used instead of the cream.

Golden Sauce

Rub to a cream half a cup of butter and brown sugar, heat in a double boiler, and add gradually the beaten yolk of one or two eggs. Cook slowly until thick, stirring constantly, and season to taste with wine or lemon. Add a little spice if desired.

Lemon Sauce

Cream one-third cup of butter with one cup of sugar and a tablespoon of flour. Add one and one-half cups of boiling water, simmer until smooth, and add a lemon which has been chopped without peeling, removing the seeds.

Foaming Sauce

Cream half a cup of butter with a cup of sugar and add a teaspoon of cinnamon. Add one egg well beaten and, very gradually, one cup of boiling milk. Serve immediately.

Hard Sauce

Soften a cup of butter with two tablespoons of boiling water and add gradually two cups of brown sugar. Add grated nutmeg to flavor, beat until light and creamy, and serve cold.

Rice

Rice has a large amount of starch in its make-up. If you use the coated sort, it has also valuable vitamin properties. It is lacking in fat and in proteins. So rice should always be served with food containing protein and fat. It is a good accompaniment of meat or eggs. Rice pudding is a well-rounded dish. Boiled rice served with butter and sugar is good as a hearty dessert for children, and with plenty of milk to drink and some fruit would make an excellent meal.

Here are some ways of cooking rice so that it tempts the appetite and satisfies it: Rice Soup—Prepare a white sauce and while it is cooking let a slice of onion simmer in with the milk. Strain the sauce and combine with equal parts of nicely cooked rice gruel, made by boiling rice very soft in plenty of water. This soup may be varied by having a larger proportion of onion and allowing finely minced onion to remain in the soup. Cooked according to the first direction, it makes a delicate soup for invalids.

Spanish Rice—Prepare boiled rice being careful to use kernels dry and mealy. Have ready a sauce composed of stewed, canned or fresh tomatoes, chopped onions, and any other savory vegetable fancy. The basis of the sauce being stewed tomatoes, it is quite possible to vary this popular dish by changing the vegetables added to give flavor. For example, another addition that combines desirably is vegetable oyster, or okra.
