

Always of Life

BRUCE BARTON

What Makes a Job Good?

One morning the elevator started was breaking in a new elevator boy. At noon the new boy was running the car alone. He had on a uniform, and was starting and stopping with the confidence of a veteran.

From apprentice to professional in a couple of hours.

What thoughts are in that young fellow's head as he receives his instructions from the gray-haired veteran?

How can he fail to look forward and see in the older man a picture of himself twenty years from now? He is taking up a low paid job—a job with no future. Twenty years from now he will be just where he is today—only older, with a grasp on the job somewhat less secure. His experience will count for nothing, because it is experience that any other man can gain in a couple of days.

He may from time to time, force an increase in his pay. But the increase will not be large. Why?

Because he learned the job in two days. And in any other two days the company can find plenty of men who will learn just as fast and take the job away from him.

Recently I met in a hotel restaurant a friend of mine who has just come back from England after taking special work in surgery under some of the greatest men in the world.

He is thirty-one years old; it is fourteen years since he entered college.

For ten of those fourteen years he has been in medical schools, in hospitals, and in foreign countries studying.

Fourteen long years of hard, uninterrupted study. Years made more difficult by the necessity for self-support; and filled sometimes with questionings, as he has seen his college class-mates moving forward to their places as well paid physicians, and he lingering still in school.

Yet with what result?

He has acquired a specialized training such as only a few other men in New York possess.

He will begin life with an income of several thousands; he will pay back his educational debts in a couple of years; in ten years his income will be tens of thousands.

Fourteen years of his life went into the mastery of his profession. But he need have no fear of losing what he has gained. No other man can displace him, except at the cost of fourteen years work.

And when he said it he epitomized the philosophy of Business.

The job that the gods sell for two hours' training is worth just what it costs.

Only that job is worth much which has tied to it the price tag of constant, unceasing study and work.

"OTHER PEOPLE'S BUSINESS" IS TITLE OF CHAUTAUQUA PLAY

A determined young ex-service man secures a position in a factory under a heavy handicap set by the president of the organization. How this sterling young man forges ahead from the shipping department up the ladder of success and the manner in which he overcomes obstacles is told in the play "Other People's Business." The story deals with a wealthy manufacturer and his son and daughter. Clever and make a meringue for the top of the pie. Return to the oven and bake until the meringue is brown. Remember that one-crust pies are delicious in summer, when the filling may consist of fruit. Berries of all sorts with whipped cream, make a delicious filling. And so do raw cherries, slightly sweetened after being pitted, with a soft custard poured over them in a pastry shell. Peaches are as good as berries with whipped cream in a one-crust pie.

MANY COYOTES KILLED.
Of the 647 coyotes killed in Oregon during April by predatory animal control hunters, 232 were killed by hunters stationed in the county. This was the largest number killed in any one county during the month. J. W. Carsner working with H. W. Dohy's killed 11 adults and 151 pups. A. J. Knoblock and Mr. Dohy's ended the lives of 11 adult coyotes and 39 pups. D. V. Nicely killed 2 adults and 18 pups.

WOOL MART SECURED.
A contract with Sears-Roebuck and company to furnish all knitting yarns to be sold in its retail stores in the next year has been obtained by the Oregon Worsteds company of Portland. Yarns have been supplied for coast stores of this organization in previous years, the high quality of which enabled the Portland firm to secure the latest contract. This means a bigger market for Oregon wools and more employment for Oregon labor.

PROFITS

The Ford Motor Company earned $81,797,861 profits in 1929. That was the first profitable year since 1926. In 1927, when the factory was shut down for six months while new machinery for the production of Model A was being installed, the company lost $42,786,727. In 1928 while the market for Model A was being built up, the company lost $72,221,498.

Those are amazing figures. No less amazing is the Ford report of cash on hand on December 31, 1929, totalling $346,937,496. Most of this is money on deposit, subject to check. For many years Henry Ford has carried a larger cash balance than any man in the world ever had.

Only a closed corporation like this in which all of the stock is owned by one man, his wife and his son, can do business on such a basis. In other corporations, stockholders demand distribution of assets in dividends. Mr. Ford once told me that the reason he bought out his other stockholders, Senator Couzens and the Dodge Brothers, was because they wanted dividends and he wanted to use the profits to enlarge the business and reduce the cost of production. If he had not had such enormous cash resources he could not have weathered the crisis which the abandonment of the old Model T caused. As it was, the loss of $115,000,000 in two years was a mere incident.

courage and duty than to turn them loose when children in the company of the great masters of literature.

TELEVISION

The other day I sat in a little room on Bethune Street, New York, and talked face to face with a man in another little room on Dey Street, three miles away. I could see him and he could see me, as plainly as if he were in the same room. The conversation was as if we were talking across a table—no telephone instrument to speak into or to hold to the ear.

That was the first public demonstration of two-way television. It works. The electrical engineers who explained it told me that it will work over ten thousand miles by radio as easily as over those three miles by wire.

It is still very expensive to install and maintain. It will be cheaper. Very soon there will be little rooms in every important center of population, like the ones Mr. Campbell and I sat in, to which anybody can go and for a fee talk to people hundreds of miles away, seeing them as if face to face.

Television is another age-old dream come true.

Hints for the Home

PIES
The tenderness or shortness of pastry depends to a great extent upon the amount of flour in proportion to the shortening, as a general rule, use one-fourth to one-third as much shortening as flour. Just enough water should be used to cause the paste to stick together, for the less amount of water, the more brittle the crust will be. The paste should be put together quickly and handled as little as possible for a great deal of handling results in a tough crust. All ingredients should be as cold as possible for if the shortening is warm and soft it will stick to the board.

A thin fruit juice has a tendency to soak into the crust. Rubbing the crust with the white of egg helps to prevent this.

If an upper crust is used, it must be split in several places to allow the steam to escape.

Good Pie Crust
To make crust try this recipe: One and one-half cups flour, one-third to one-half cup shortening, one-half teaspoon salt, cold water. Sift flour and salt together, cut in the fat by means of two knives until all is reduced to a fine powder. Add the cold water slowly and just enough to make the dough stick together. Put out on a floured board and roll thinly into circular shape to fit the plate. Fit it loosely into the plate, allowing it to come a little over the edge, as it shrinks when baked. Trim edges.

If two crusts are used, moisten the edge of lower crust before placing upper crust and then press edges together to prevent juice from escaping.

Having mastered the pastry part of the pie, the next thing is to make the pie itself. Here are some suggestions for it:

Have ready one crust and make the filling as follows:
Two cups milk, two eggs, three tablespoons butter, two tablespoons cornstarch, one cup brown sugar, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon vanilla.

Scald the milk in a double boiler. Mix the cornstarch and sugar; add to the milk. Stir until thick and cook for fifteen minutes. Add the butter and salt, then the lightly beaten egg yolks. Return to the double boiler and cook for one minute. Cool, add vanilla to flavor and fill the crust with the mixture. Have ready the beaten egg whites combined with a tablespoon of sugar

The Graduate's Gift—Jewelry

When the young student starts out in life, one of the best ways to wish her (or him) god-speed is to make a gift of jewelry.

For jewelry is the one gift that is lasting—it will serve as a constant reminder all of the student's life of associations and friendships at the threshold of the earthly pilgrimage.

Therefore pay your tribute to the graduate with a dainty ring, a stylish wrist watch, a brooch, a cameo, a signet ring, a pocket watch of gold or silver, or any of the innumerable novelties suitable as gifts that are obtainable here at prices lower than you would expect.
