Please bear in mind the date of the child clinic to be held in Ione Monday, June 9. The clinic will be in the school building and will begin promptly at 9 o'clock in the morning. Mothers are requested to bring a bag to put their baby's clothing in, while the examination is being made, and also a towel to wrap the child in while waiting for the examination. Children from six months to two years of age, as well as those who will enter school for the first time this fall will be given physical examinations.

Decoration day was very quiet in Ione, there being no special services. The morning sun shone upon the flags which the Legion boys had placed in the cemetery over the graves of the departed soldiers. All day long the friends and relatives were making the pilgrimage to the hill, placing flowers on the graves in loving remembrance. Our one remaining Civil war veteran, C. A. Low, was able to go to the cemetery this year. For the past two years he had been unable to go. Several of our people spent the day out of town and some visited nearby cemeteries.

A. McCabe and son Clifford who have been working in the timber for some time getting out of the brush. They joined their picnic party and all had an enjoyable day. W. C. T. U. NOTES.

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter.

Upon one point it appears that the wets and dries are agreed almost unanimously, and that is that the saloon should not come back. The wets are loud in their assertion that no one wants the return of the saloon. Well, even the wets must give a little credit to prohibition, for it is generally conceded that prohibition put the saloon out of business.

On the question of law enforcement, it may be appropriate to quote what President Harding said in his address to the Northwest Association of Sheriffs and Police at Vancouver, B. C., in July, 1923. He said:

"I very greatly cherish this mark of distinction which you bestow upon me. There is no civilization without law, and no civilization will abide without law enforcement, and I count it a very great and gratifying distinction to be numbered among those of our day who are insistent upon the righteous and just enforcement of the laws everywhere.

"I have not been discussing laws themselves. There are laws about which there is room for a division of opinion, but in free government law must be supreme, and those who do not give heart and soul and energy to the fullest in law enforcement are lacking in patriotic devotion to the government under which they live.

"Of course there is a peculiar honor and distinction in belonging to the forces of the great Northwest. Many of us have read and been thrilled by the stories of your heroisms and your courage and your fidelity to duty. It has been an inspiration to men everywhere, and out of your sacrifices and your heroisms have come this fine civilization of the Northwest, which is not alone a deserved advance for humanity itself, but is an added glory to the Dominion of Canada and the Republic of the United States of America. So, I rejoice to be one of you."

The president made the above address in response to the presentation to him of a certificate of life membership in the association.

There are less than 35,000,000 automobiles in the world. Of these the United States has more than 26,500,000. Most people do not realize how much the coming of the automobile has complicated law enforcement. Not only is the motor car used in committing crimes, but it affords a most effective way of getting away from the scene of the crime. This applies not only to the liquor traffic, but to all other crimes. However, the automobile is one of the strongest arguments against the return of the liquor business. More and more the people will insist that the drunken driver be kept off the road. This means a stronger support of prohibition by the people.

LABOR SURPLUS REPORTED.

The United States Employment service, reporting through its local office in Portland, in its May bulletin gives out the announcement: "A surplus of workers," as the opening of each paragraph in all the centers covered - Portland, Gresham, Corvallis, McMinnville, Salem, Albany, Eugene, The Dalles, La Grande, Medford and Ashland - and several of the towns say they expect that situation to continue through the season.

SANITATION ADVISED.

It is healthier to live in a large city with modern sanitation than in the country with lack of sanitation, warns G. V. Copson, bacteriologist at Oregon State college. He advises that water be tested if the well is closer than 100 feet to any source of pollution, and if it is found bad either move the source of pollution or move the well.
