that comes from hydrants in Heppner since connection was made with the city's new artesian well is the subject for favorable comment by citizens on every hand. They are elated, and they want the world to know that Heppner has an abundant supply of as fine water as can be had anywhere. The occasion of the coming of the new water has provided a common ground for everyone within the confines of the city to get together for staging a celebration commemorating the event. This will be held at the forks of Willow creek, 12 miles southeast of the city, July 4, with a dedicatures appropriate on Uncle Sam's birthday. All Heppner will be there and they are extending an invitation to the outside world to come and share their expression of joy in the occasion. It is planned to make it one of the outstanding events in the city's history.

Among the elemental needs of man are air, food and water. Without any one of these he cannot sub-Threaten him with deprivation even for a short while of any one and he immediately forgets all else in the struggle for self-preservation. All the petty problems of the intricate social and economic structure that a moment before occupied his entire existence, immediately are forgotten. Union with his fellowman is sought in fighting a common cause.

So it is fitting that when a provident Nature delves deep into the bounties and relieves man of all anxiety as to these things on which his very existence depends, that he should again seek union with his fellowman, and on common ground thank the Creator that has made it possible for him to live without a thought as to the providing of these necessities and thus occupy himself solely with the affairs of life, so abundantly enriched by the civilizations of the past.

AN INVITATION.

A LIKELY array of talent will appear under the big tent beginning tomorrow night and continuing with two programs daily Saturday, Sunday and Monday, when Heppner will be host to Morrow county for the annual free chautauqua. Well worth the time and effort that may required, everyone should make it a point to attend as many of the programs as possible. Not only for programs as possible.
