Official Paper for Morrow County.

SIGN IS NEEDED.

AT the meeting of the Lions club Monday, the question was raised as to the proper marking of the Heppner-Spray road. J. G. Barratt stated that he had recently come down the John Day highway, and he found that at many points along the road garage and service station men were raising complaints that the people could not find just where this road took off for Heppner, and stating further that if the proper signs were posted, they would be only too glad to give travelers the tip and direct them over the road toward Heppner. Commissioner Bleakman, in answer stated that one reason, he thought, why signs had not yet been placed, was the incomplete state of the road across the mountain; much of the year this has been very bad, and the sending of people over the road before it was completed could but result in condemnation of the route. In answer Mr. Barratt stated that he found the road at the present time in very good shape; in fact the worst part of the trip was from the mouth of Chapin creek, at the end of the forest road, to the mouth of McKinney creek, where the road joins the macadam to Heppner.

It appears to this paper that there could be no objection whatever to having the road properly marked with signs at this time as there would be little difficulty in letting the traveling public know they were entering upon an incomplete but fairly passable highway; that the saving in distance and time would make up all the inconvenience suffered by a few miles of unsurfaced road bed. Tourists and others desiring to get through to Heppner and other points north from the interior can save time by coming over this road at the present season of the year, nad proper signs should be erected showing where the Heppner-Spray road leaves the John Day highway at the mouth of Haystack creek.

A GOOD CHOICE.

THE nomination of Phil Metschan by the republican central committee at Portland on Saturday will not and does not please all elements of the republican party in the state, yet we are of the opinion that it is perhaps as good a choice as the committee could have made. Mr. Metschan is a man who has served the party faithfully and well in his capacity as state chairman. He has never before asked for or held public office by the choice of the people, and his very wide acquaintance over the state will no doubt help him to put across a successful campaign. He will have to face the opposition of the Joseph "wing" of the party, who are determined to place an independent in the field, and a three-cornered fight is always problematical as to the final outcome.

TIME FOR THE TURN TO COME.

ACCORDING to the political and business prophets who were so full of optimism last Winter and Spring, the nation ought at this time to be beginning to feel the pulsations of returning business activity.

Signs of the expected upturn are noted by several observers, and there is a general feeling among those who make it their business to watch events that the lowest point of the depression has been reached.

Perhaps the most reliable reports are those made to the National Conference of Business Paper Editors and the Associated Business Papers. According to these 150 publications which are intimately in touch with as many different lines of business, there is no line in which there are now stocks on hand in sufficient quantity to carry on even sub-normal business for very long. Buying must begin within a few weeks, these observers report. As soon as buying begins, factories must increase production.

It is interesting to note that in some lines of business there has been no falling off this year as compared with last, but a definite increase. While some lines have suffered a 40 per cent shrinkage, the consumption of electric current for the first six months of 1930 was 2 percent greater than in the same period of 1929.

It has been a curious sort of a business crisis, in that consumer purchases in general have not been greatly curtailed and wages have been reduced in only a few cases. In spite of all the talk about unemployment, there is no evidence of poverty nor any general economic distress.

Wall Street reports that many large foreign loans will be made in the early Fall. The proceeds of those loans will be used abroad to purchase American goods, thus stmiulating export trade. Home mortgage loans are reported easier in some sections and home building is picking up. Bank credits are expanding, indicating that idle money is being put to work.

Nobody can predict the future with certainty. If we could, we would not be running a newspaper but playing the stock market or dealing in grain or cotton futures. But in the long run we pin our faith, as we have always done, on the future of the United States of America. We believe that this country is still moving forward toward the goal of universal and continuous prosperity for everybody and that any set-back can never be anything but slight and temporary.

THE "LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE."

IT is becoming more and more the custom for people on their summer vacations to go back, for a brief visit at least, to the homes of their childhood. Perhaps that is because automobiles and motor highways make it easier to do that than it used to be; perhaps it is because city folk are beginning to realize that the country towns they came from are changing, growing themselves into cities, and that soon the old landmarks will be gone, swallowed up by the relentless maw of Progress.

One of the vanishing landmarks is the old fashioned country school. The old schoolhouse—we don't know why people refer to it so often as "the little red schoolhouse," for most of them that we have seen were painted white—is one of the places nearly all of us like to look up when we go "back home." The memories of childhood cluster more thickly about it than any other structure except the old homestead itself. The church was a place to which we were dragged rather reluctantly. Not that we were always enthusiastic about going to school, but at least the school was a democracy of our own kind. Except for the teacher, who was only one against many, we children had things pretty much our own way. We lived in a world of our own for a few hours a day. We were among those of our own kind, who thought the same thoughts, spoke the same language, looked on the world from the same perspective.

There is no manner of doubt that the modern consolidated or union schools are far better for their avowed purpose of inserting something we call "education" into the minds of the young. But those who have had the good fortune to begin their educational careers in such schoolhouses as the one which Henry Ford has preserved at Sudbury, Mass., the veritable school to which Mary's little lamb followed her, where one carved one's initials on the rough board desks, will always feel a certain superiority over those who never had such advantages.

Somehow the old fashioned country school seems, in perspective, closer akin to the pioneer spirit which is the spirit of America, than any modern structure with its graded classrooms, steam heat, electric light and wholesome ventilation. But, like the ox-team and the covered wagon, it is disappearing. Our advice to every reader who ever attended such a country school is to take a good look at it this year, for next year it may be gone forever.

George N. Peck was in town on Monday, coming after some extras for the combine which had been laid off by a break in some necessary part of its "vitals." George is not altogether happy over his enforced idleness at this particular time, caused by the breaking of his wrist a couple of weeks ago. The injury has laid him off the job for the summer, but he is pushing the harvesting work along in good shape regardless.

NAOMI AND RUTH—A STORY IN RACIAL RELATIONSHIPS.

Ruth 1:6-10, 14-22.

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Read the entire book of Ruth. You will find it a delightful short story for summer reading. The romance is thrilling and the applications are vital to our every-day life. The range of territory is from Bethlehem to Bethel and begins with a famine in Palestine. By reason of the distress Elimelech, his wife Naomi and their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion left the homeland for food and abode in Moab, on the further side of the Jordan river. All went well for a while. The sons married Moabitess women and food ceased to be a problem.

From joy to distress is often only a step. Three deaths made three widows and serious personal problems must be faced by these women. It is too often that way in life as it is met today. Women must meet the situation in which the men place them. Naomi does the natural thing in planning to return to her own land and kindred. The daughters-in-law, following custom, go with her for a distance and then plan to take their leave. In Oriental fashion they enter into a lengthy discussion and even offer to go back with the mothers-in-law. Orphah receives the kiss of farewell and turns back to her local problem of life. Ruth then becomes fully aware of her great affection for Naomi and this has evidently been produced, in part, by the way in which this mother-in-law lived out her faith in Jehovah. Then Ruth seperates herself from all that has been dear in Moab and gives the classic expression of friendship as she casts her lot in every way with Naomi.

Nothing is recorded about the long, hard journey to Bethlehem. That is the way in life. We can forget, whither we have come after we have arrived. The details are daily incidents but they do not have to be continuously reviewed. Town people turn out to meet them but the greeting is hardly a Welcome Home. Then hardy Ruth begins to further reveal her charming character. Work is always a great solace as well as a constructive help in life. She will "follow the gleaners" and in this way finds a bushel of grain for their little household. Cheer revives as soon as daily bread is assured. Reconstruction can begin at any low level of experience. Right there we can establish a foundation and build thereon. The familiar saying is invariably a truth, when we will, "A man is down but not out."

Romance evidently begins with love at first sight as Boaz notes this really charming Moabitess. Read the book again for all the details. Sit in with the court at the gate of the city and observe the implication of the removed sandal, by the next of kin. In time we find that a new home has been established and Ruth is able to croon baby Obed, who becomes the grandfather of David. Thus Ruth is in the ancestry of none other than Jesus, the Son of Mary.

When we learn the good in others there is no place for race prejudice which so many seem to cultivate in adult life. Such feelings do not exist among the children but is a product of growing years. Paul, in his address on Mars Hill refers to the fatherhood of Jehovah: "And he made one of every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth," Acts 17-26. This Golden Text for today should help to establish a different attitude toward the "Stranger within our gates," and do all in our power to make those of other nationalities at home in this free land of religious liberty. In this melting pot of civilization all of us need to work together for the common good and thus reveal the very best that is in the heritage of each.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

AN EPISODE

Bill sat in his buzzing flivver at the front gate, awaiting revised orders as to what he should bring from town. After a long moment, his father's head appeared at the little farmhouse door, with "That's all, Bill,—an' be shore not to forget them pills—an' hurry right back."

The farm-boy chugged away, finally pulling up in front of the village drug store; "I want a box of the best liver pills ye got," he informed the spectacled dispenser of life-savers; after some discussion as to the sort most effective, Bill took a quarter's worth of the "improved," any three of which would have probably torn through a wooden man. The dutiful boy soon gathered the rest of his items and skurried home.

John, Bill's elder brother, had been "layin' around two days, with colic in his bowels—couldn't work—needed his liver shook up"; symptoms, diagnosis, treatment. Johnny took a full dose of "the best pills to be had," that night at bedtime. He put in a bad night, Johnny did; by the middle of the next day he was very much swollen in the abdomen, was in great pain and at intervals, delirious. The mother called the doctor.

It didn't take ten minutes for the physician to build a few conclusions—sharp and emphatic they were. "This boy has a ruptured appendix and consequent peritonitis; you should have consulted me at the very beginning of his complaint; now it is very late; he must be rushed to the best hospital available, right now! Every split second of delay lessens our chances of saving his life!"

After a long, tedious fight, Johnny succumbed; his entire system was saturated with the infection. The "improved" pill had wrought its desolation.

If this story impresses upon my reader the fact that, a cathartic pill should NEVER be given to a patient with abdominal pain—then I shall feel rewarded for the effort many times. Better safe than sorry. See the doctor first.
