WHY IS IT SO?

BASED on brazen assertions unfounded in fact, or unsupported by proof, is the campaign being waged by Julius L. Meier, independent candidate for governor. Posing as the champion of the people and of the principles upheld by his close friend, the late George W. Joseph, who received the Republican nomination for governor by a slight plurality and by no means a majority of the party vote at the May primaries he says the issues of the campaign are clearly defined. "Of primary importance is the need for federal, state and municipal development of water power that cheap power may be made available for domestic and commercial use."

If this is an issue and of such primary importance to the state of Oregon, it would seem that Mr. Meier's most ardent supporters would be the largest users of electricity, few, if any of whom have come forward with charges of exorbitant rates or dissatisfaction with service under existing conditions. Portland is Oregon's industrial center. For seventeen years its people have had the privilege to take over and operate its power sources. Certainly, if the manufacturing interests with their large resources, were being driven onto the rocks by exorbitant power rates, they would long ago have made an effort that could have gone a long way toward bringing about municipal operation. That they do not want it is evidenced by numbers of their leaders upholding the present system, and declaring their power bills to be very minor items in their cost of operation. Who is there in Heppner who believes that even a fifty per cent reduction in the cost of their light and power bill would spell the difference between success or failure? That is, not considering payments on labor-saving devices, the purchase of which was made of their own free will and the value of which was recognized at the time such devices were purchased, otherwise they would not have been purchased.

It would seem the height of inconsistency, while accusing the so-called "power trust" of all kinds of thievery and skullduggery to do away with the state's only power for its regulation, the public service commission, while at the same time offering absolutely no tangible, concrete and practical way for the government to go into the power business, or at least taking no steps to secure legislators bound to such action, who, in the final analysis, have the only power of putting across such a program within the state.

While making the bald, unfounded and unsubstantiated assertion that the "power interests" are spending large sums of money in an attempt to defeat the independent candidate, this same candidate is making many times the display of wealth that either of the other two candidates or all the power companies combined are making.

It may be that black is not so black and white is not so white. At least Mr. Meier is intimately acquainted with Mr. Fleishacker, owner of the Portland Telegram, Meier's chief campaign mouthpiece, whose obtaining of immense wealth from power interests in California was recently closed with Mr. Fleishacker and other big shots in the power business but did not talk politics only a business in which the gentlemen had common interest.

The price of grain may not go to suit us, and there may be a lot of hokum in the governor's race, but who says he's dissatisfied with the weather after the rain?

EUROPEAN POLITICS.
THERE is something puzzling to the American mind, to read the reports of the recent election of members of the German Reichstag or Congress. No less than thirteen parties elected members. We think American politics is confused but what would he think if we had thirteen political parties sufficiently strong to elect members to Congress? There have been rare occasions when there have been three parties represented at Washington, and once there were four, for a single session. But our whole political system is based on the two-party plan. Minor differences are swallowed up or compromised in party programs and platforms.

The most striking thing about the German election is the sudden jump of the National Socialist or Fascist party, from 12 seats to 107. Added to the 143 seats held by the regular Socialist party, and the 76 seats held by the Communists, this apparently puts rampant radicalism in the saddle.

That may have significance to the rest of the world. The policy of the Fascist party calls for the unification of Germany and Austria, annulment of the treaties of Versailles and St. Germain, equality in military force with every other European nation and the restoration of Germany's colonies along with many items for internal democratization. If the dominant force in the new Reichstag undertakes to put any such program into effect, another European war would seem to be inevitable. The safety in the situation lies in the improbability of any two radical groups agreeing on the same program.

IMMIGRATION.

THIS is a good time to check up on immigration, and the report of the State Department made to President Hoover indicates that the authorities at Washington are doing everything possible to prevent foreign labor from coming into the United States at a time when not all of our own people can find employment.

In normal times, a person who is able-bodied and intelligent is not regarded as "liable to become a public charge," and so is admitted, if his other qualifications are all right. Now the consular service is instructed to make certain, in every case, that the intended immigrant is going to be able to live for a considerable period in the United States before he gets a job.

Mexican immigration into the United States has practically ceased, the State Department reports, as a result of this restriction. Canadian immigration has fallen off materially. Unless a foreigner has relatives in the United States, which entitles him or her to preference, he is having a harder time than ever before to get into this country.

That is as it should be. Our first duty is to our own people. Likewise, the policy announced by Governor Roosevelt of New York, of employing only citizens on public works, is in accord with the needs of the times.

WHITE-COLLAR MEN.

ONE result of every period of inflation is that it renders so many young men discontined when the inevitable slump comes and they are no longer able to get large money for small work.

Among the unemployed now are tens of thousands of these "white-collar men" who never took their jobs very seriously. They could always get another so they thought, meantime, they tried to emulate the rich and spent their incomes faster than they received them.

Those men placed a false value upon themselves and their services. And many of them have not yet been disillusioned. They still think they are worth the fat salaries they used to draw, and most of them will never be happy again, remembering always the days of easy money.

The really intelligent office workers are the ones who have made themselves so useful to their employers that they are the last to be paid off when times are dull. They have sense enough to realize that the way to get ahead is to spend less than they earn, to plug away steadily at the day's work, and be content with that. They are the ones who have stored up happiness to tide them over the dull times.

STARTS PORTLAND COURSES.

For the first time in history, the home economics school at Oregon State College has arranged to give a comprehensive series of 12 courses for credit in Portland this winter under the auspices of the college Extension service. The work will cover subjects of most interest to homemakers.

MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS—AN EXAMPLE OF MOTHERHOOD.

Luke 2:15-19; John 2:1-5; 19:25-27

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

In addition to the three passages indicated above give special attention to the record of the Annunciation as recorded in Luke 1:26-28. Gabriel was again made the messenger, even as he went to Zacharias and told about the birth of John the Baptist. Mary understood the import of the promise of a child, for the Hebrews had been looking expectantly for the coming of their long promised Messiah. It was with triumphant faith that Mary then went to visit her relative Elisabeth and was given special confirmation that what Gabriel said was being accomplished in her. The Holy Spirit had indeed come upon her with His creative power.

The events of the Nativity at Bethlehem are familiar and we again take our places with shepherds and wise men in adoration.

Mary did her part in training her Son and exerting a blessed home influence during the next thirty years in Nazareth. The day came when, as in the case of all other parents, Mary was forced to realize that her Son had grown into adult life and she could no longer direct His activities. There was a wedding in Cana, about five miles from Nazareth and Mary was one of the invited guests. Jesus and the disciples who were then with Him may have dropped in while passing and thus unexpectedly added to the company to be provided for. When the wine failed and this was a calamity on such an occasion, Mary brought the matter to the attention of Jesus. This suggests that during all the years in the Nazareth home this Son had been the one to meet each emergency with his thoughtfulness and ability. When the mother returned to Nazareth she had still more occasion to follow her habit of years as recorded in the Golden Text: "Mary kept all these things, pondering them in her heart."

COOLING OF MILK FOUND PRACTICAL

College Reports on Refrigeration
Methods for Dairy Farmers;
Price Is Important.

For less than the price of the cheapest new car a dairy farmer with access to electric service may install an automatic milk or cream cooler which will lower the temperature of milk soon after milking to less than 50 degrees F. and do it far cheaper than can be done with ice at a half a cent per pound.

These facts were brought out in careful experiments conducted by the Oregon State College experiment station in cooperation with the Oregon Committee on Electricity in Agriculture and recently reported on in a new bulletin entitled "Mechanical Refrigeration of Milk in a Tank-Type Cooler." The work was done by F. E. Price, C. J. Hurd and G. V. Copson of the agricultural engineering and bacteriological departments.

By use of insulated tank equipment designed and built at the experiment station and recently exhibited at the state fair, a farmer can cool the night's milk and hold it over to be shipped with the morning milk with no increase in bacterial count. Or he can keep cream sweet for delivery as premium quality not more than a couple of times a week. Full directions for making the equipment are given in the new bulletin.

Whether it will pay a dairyman to install such mechanical cooling equipment depends wholly on whether he can obtain 10 to 15 cents per hundred premium for the milk cooled in that manner. Many Oregon creameries are already paying a premium for sweet cream.
