"NO MASTER, BUT..."

JULIUS L. MEIER aspires to be business manager of Oregon. He will serve the state in a capacity similar to that which he now holds with a large business concern. In his present position he controls the destinies of many individuals. As the kind of governor he hopes to be he would materially enlarge his powers; many more people would look to him for succor. In such case, what kind of a deal might labor expect? On Monday, December 11, 1922, the Central Labor Council of Portland placed Meier & Frank company on the "unfair" list. In the statement issued by the council over the signatures of its president and secretary, was said: "Prior to placing this firm on the unfair list a committee waited on Julius Meier, head of the firm, and asked for a conference for consideration of the grievances. The committee reported to the council December 11 that Mr. Meier declined to give the matter consideration until the first of the year. He appeared, so the committee reported, to be indignant that demands should be made upon him until after the holiday season and insinuated that if his position did not meet with the approval of the council he could not help it. "The Meier & Frank store, perhaps the largest department store on the Pacific coast, has the reputation of paying wages which are insufficient to maintain a girl in decency. Sales girls, employed by the firm, must deny themselves all but the bare necessities or they must live with parents who contribute to their support. This condition exists while the owners pile up millions of profits." The quoted paragraphs are a part of the statement of the council issued in 1922. The letter now being circulated by the council to show its stand relative to Mr. Meier, carries an addendum by C. J. Hayes, 3rd international vice president Retail Clerks International Protective association, as follows: "Julius L. Meier has set himself up as a friend of labor and is seeking an indorsement from labor and the working men's support in his campaign for governor. He is posing as a friend of the people. "This letter, prepared and circulated by the Central Labor Council in December, 1922, exposes his true attitude toward labor. The conditions complained of in 1922 have not been materially changed. He has not bettered conditions, nor attempted to better them. He is still paying his employees notoriously low wages while piling up millions in profits. Under such conditions can Mr. Meier have the audacity of parading around the state posing and proclaiming to be a friend of the wage earners?" Still his campaign henchmen shout, "he is absolutely independent, having no interest to serve but the public interest, no master to serve but the people."

THE ISSUES AND THE MEN.

(Ontario Argus) THE OREGON JOURNAL, which is one of the leading champions of the candidacy of Julius Meier in the present campaign, is authority for the statement that it is not the men, but the issues which are paramount in the present campaign. Perhaps the reason the Journal would have this, is because it has no desire to champion the personality and the record of its candidate and his associates. We can appreciate the Journal's position. During its long and brilliant career under its founder, Sam Jackson, the Journal never permitted itself to be forced into such company as Jay Bowerman, Bruce Dennis, Fred Brady, Fred Gifford. In fact it was the Journal which in the primary did a great deal to defeat the candidacy of Governor Norblad by exposing the alleged connection of Fred Brady with the Norblad organization. Apparently the fact that Mr. Brady is now supporting the Journal's candidate has cleansed him of whatever wrong-doing he may have committed in the eyes of the Journal, thus permitting him to enter the select company of Ralph Watson, Marshall Dana and other up-lifters on the Journal staff. In giving them personally, however, it is our private opinion that they hang their heads in shame when they contemplate their now bosom political friends. But if it is the issue and not the man, then indeed political history and experience plainly indicate that Phil Metschan is right in his declaration that the question is one of state socialism. If Oregon is to launch upon a scheme of socialization of electric energy it is bound for trouble. If electric energy can be successfully socialized so, too, can the banking business, the mercantile business, the publishing business and agriculture. They differ from each other only in degree. If it is wrong for an investor in an electric enterprise to make a profit restricted by public regulation certainly it is a far greater wrong for such institutions as that operated by the Journal's candidate to make the profit every merchant in the state knows it makes on some of the products it sells. If Oregon is to abandon the philosophy of government through which by individual initiative this great commonwealth has been developed, and start a leveling down program, we might as well get ready to go the whole way.

HOARDED DOLLARS AND DULL BUSINESS.

(A worthwhile editorial selected by the National Editorial Association.) THE ONLY way to keep business good is to keep money circulating rapidly. It is not so much the amount of money in the country that helps business—it is the speed of turnover that counts. The great difference between good and dull business conditions is the rate at which money changes hands. One dollar spent twice develops the same amount of business as two dollars spent once. There is as much money in this country today as in the most flourishing business periods of this country, but it is hidden away—hoarded where it does no one the least bit of good. To relieve the business stagnation the hidden treasures should be brought to light, spent where it will do the most

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for October 15. SIMON AND ANNA Luke 2:25-32. Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D. Sins in adult life engulf many who are able to overcome all the temptations that come with growing youth and middle age. One reason may be that there is an overconfidence with the advancing years. Two Bible characters help to show us how to grow old safely and gracefully. Simon and Anna accomplished this, in part, by continuing purposeful during every year. Simon must have been a Temple character. For years he had been noted by all who came up to worship there. Evidently his piety was not a matter of affectation. Real religion is as noticeable today. Reference to the Holy Spirit is most significant. Like the Second Person in the Trinity, the Third Person was coexistent with the Fa-good and not be allowed to rust when men and women are in search for work and business is at a standstill. We must admit that business depression and the unemployment problem are serious things. Yet, these problems can easily be solved. There is not a problem under the heavenly skies that cannot be solved. Hoarding of money causes unemployment; unemployment causes business depression, and business depression causes hard times. The change of the moon or the close proximity of Saturn or Jupiter or any other planet do not have anything to do with hard times. Hard times are the makings of our own, and sometimes they are more imaginary than anything else. Sometimes, in fact quite often, we are more imaginary than anything else. Sometimes, in fact quite often, we let our minds dwell too much about something awful that is going to happen, and hard times follow. We sometimes fret about how to meet our monthly bills, we worry about how the milk man is to be paid when we have not the necessary $3.20, or how we are going to stay on the job when rumors have it that the shop is going to close. We don't feel inclined to extend credit to Harry Brown or Bill Smith because we have heard that perhaps he will not be able to pay his bill when due. And so it goes all the way down the line. Hard times, business depression and mental agony becomes a fixture in our mind and so naturally we have those inconvenient things on our hands. If we were a little more optimistic, a little more sympathetic with our fellow men, a little more confident in our own ability to meet circumstances, as they arrive, and a little more interested in what we are going to do today than about what is going to happen if the Sonsnev construction company fails to put up the Casey Poland tower or that the Oskahoos bank, where we have a few dollars on deposit, may fail, or that the Germans may not pay their war debts, we would not have business depression, farm relief or the unemployment question to be worried about. Get your money out of cold storage, put it in circulation, and see how soon you will stimulate business.—James H. Anderson, Editor Kansas City Labor News.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

The Undernourished I believe it is the practical thoughts that benefit mankind most; the ideas that folks can assimilate to a full appreciation of their worth. There is plenty of instructive matter in the field round about us, if we only pause long enough to observe intelligently. The pig is a marvel in his capacity to take on avoirdupois; our lean and lanky brethren could, it seems to me, learn more from a study of the lowly porker than from many pages of words about the elusive and mysterious vitamins and calories. The pig is not a thinker; he is neither saint nor sinner; he worries not about the yesterday or the tomorrow; he just lies as God intended that he should; he does not worry, and never squeals unless something interferes with his comfort; and—never has indigestion, jaundice, appendicitis, diabetes, melancholia, paralysis, insanity, flat-foot, anaemia, psittacosis, cataract, glaucoma, "female trouble," or rheumatism or neuritis. Neither would humanity, if it lived as sensibly as the average pig does. I fail to see the wisdom of rushing frantically after "science" when we might learn so much from the common American pig. The splendid rose attains perfection in the proper sort of atmosphere, soil, light, warmth, moisture, and dryness in right proportion, with hours for repose. The human being expects to be healthy by taking no thought and violating nine out of ten of nature's laws; men know they require eight hours of sleep; it takes that much to repair the worn-out cells that come from the day's work; they rush on, often with four hours of fitful unconsciousness, awoken by the alarm clock, and rushing on the more. They become starvelings, harassed by shattered nerves, tortured by indigestion, reduced by bodily sin against right living. Thousands of men are rushing on, forgetful of penalties. This fallacy more than any other single thing, is responsible for our increasing tax burden. I once observed how skillfully one million dollars was extracted from a state legislature by the argument that most of the money would be paid by the railroads, anyway. The state, the argument ran, would be getting a dollar's worth of university buildings for 50 cents. But the naked truth is that every man and woman who ate a meal in that state, who bought a suit of clothes, or who lived in a house, helped to pay the dollars which the legislators thought they were taking out of the hide of the railroads. The railroads simply collected it from the people who shipped freight or bought goods which some one else had shipped. Another fallacy is that everything from the Government is free. Free

FOUR PRINCIPLES GUIDE. Four essential principles must be in every successful farmers' co-operative marketing organization, says George O. Gatlin, marketing specialist at Oregon State college. Experience has shown, he says, that to succeed such an organization must furnish a definite service needed by producers; it must have sufficient volume of business to operate efficiently; must have a loyal membership, and must have good management.
