

NIGHT PARIS GAY;
GIRL TELLS TRIP

Bavaria and the chief art center of Germany. Munich was established by monks one thousand years ago. One of the most famous medical schools in the world is at Munich. The university there has 9000 students, ten per cent of whom are girls.

In every large city, whether of friend or foe, we placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's grave. This was a part of our "Friendship Tour." The Germans could hardly understand our doing this but they liked it. Munich has a war memorial where are engraved 13,000 names of war dead. Our delegation was significant in that it was the largest American delegation to Germany since the war. We expected to find at least some bitterness but found nothing but kindness and a very real courtesy during all our trip through Germany. Munich also has one of the most famous museums in the world. Here we saw a whole submarine, fully equipped coal and iron mines. There were no "hands off" signs and one could press an electric button and watch all sorts of machinery work.

The Mozart festivals were being held in Munich and one evening we went to a Mozart serenade given in the palace of the former king of Bavaria.

From Munich we travelled to Oberammergau, little town of Passion play fame, and from there to Augsburg where we were welcomed by a great host of Christian Endeavorers and taken to the town hall where the mayor bade us welcome. In this town hall is the Golden Room said to be the most beautiful of its kind in the world. Here, too, we saw the famous theses of Martin Luther which he nailed to the church doors at Wittenburg. There are many beautiful old bibles here, printed by hand by monks and done so wonderfully that one can hardly realize it is handwriting.

Nuremberg is called "one of the quaintest old towns of Germany." I shall always remember Nuremberg because it was here that we had a most laughable experience. We never seemed to get enough water on our trip and when sat down to our meals we immediately began to call for water, which the waiters were reluctant to give us, preferring to serve us wine and beer instead. But we wanted water and finally it came in glasses that held about two swallows. Each of us had our glass refilled about four times. The next morning we were served water in very tall glasses which we thought were some kind of beer glasses. Imagine our amazement when just before we left the hotel we found that we had been served water in the hotel's flower vases!

At Eisenach we saw the Wartburg, a castle where Luther was imprisoned for eleven months and where he translated the New Testament from the Greek. Eisenach is another beautiful town and here we stayed at a hotel which was a cross between a Russian mosque and a castle.

From Eisenach on to Berlin where we were met by a big delegation of Christian Endeavorers and many newspaper reporters from Berlin's leading newspapers. Our convention there of between 14,000 and 16,000 young people from all over the world representing 42 nations and more than 80 different denominations, made considerable stir in Germany. We received messages from President Hoover, President Doumergue of France and President Von Hindenburg. The Berlin newspapers classed this convention with not only importance as a great religious gathering but one of considerable political and diplomatic importance as well.

Some of the world's greatest speakers were on the platform. The music was wonderful, such as I have never heard before and probably never will hear again. Mingling with the young people of many nations we learned more sympathy and understanding for them than through a lifetime of reading books. The Germans liked the American delegation immensely and our American convention badge was an "Open Sesame" to anything we wanted.

In Berlin we saw the famous Kaiser's palace which is now a museum and the Brandenburg Gate through whose middle arch no one was allowed to go but the Kaiser. Now anyone may walk through it. We walked down Berlin's loveliest street, Unter den Linden. Berlin is the world's third largest city but traffic moves at such a leisurely pace and the streets are so wide that one can hardly realize that it is such a large city. Another thing of interest is that there are no slum buildings in Berlin. Passing through the overcrowded portions of Berlin which we would term "Slums," the buildings are as well kept as elsewhere and everything is clean.

From Berlin we went to Brussels where we saw the king's palace, the old guild halls and the palace of the Crown Prince Leopold and Princess Astrid. Brussels is a very interesting city and I wished that I might have stayed there longer. And on to Paris. Paris becomes really gay after 10 o'clock at night. The outdoor cafes line the sidewalks and there the people drink and smoke and watch the rest pass by. The later the hour, the gayer they are. I don't know when they go to bed.

We saw the historic church of Monte Marte, Palace of the Legion of Honor, the Louvre, French academy of arts, French mints, Notre Dame cathedral, Napoleon's tomb, and took a ride along the Seine river. At the Arch de Triomphe the delegation placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's grave of France. There is a smaller replica of the Statue of Liberty in Paris. When I saw it, homesickness swept over me.

Outside of Paris some miles is the Mal Maison or private palace of Napoleon which he bought for his wife Josephine. This is now used as a museum for Napoleon's relics. Contrary to the general opinion, Napoleon was a man of very simple tastes and his coronation crown has only cameos set in gold instead of precious gems. There is a tent room in this palace as the bedroom of Josephine's because she wished to have a place to sleep as nearly like Napoleon's as possible when he was away on his campaigns. We saw Napoleon's sword, clothing, pictures, dishes and even his bathtub and camp cot!

Then the Palace of Versailles, gorgeous production of Louis IV's reign. Marie Antoinette was married here. The Hall of Mirrors is a wonderful sight. The King's bedroom was the principal room of the palace and exactly in the middle of the whole palace. The Tuilleries gardens surrounding the palace are beautiful beyond description with great fountains and acres of green lawns and lovely trees whose branches arch over the road like a cathedral.

Paris would not be properly visited without a trip to the Louvre. This immense and beautiful building would take a month to visit carefully, so I will only mention a few of the most beautiful and original paintings that we saw. The Anglers, The Cleaners, Whistler's Mother, the Mona Lisa, The Last Supper by De Vinci who took twenty years to paint the head of Christ in the picture, The Crowning of Josephine and Titan's Holy Family. We also saw the Venus de Milo and in another part relics of the Assyrian civilization and war chariots that they used 2000 B. C.

One whole day was taken with a 200 mile bus trip through the battlefields of the late war. We took the road that the "Taxi Cab" army of Paris took to the front. Along this road passed 1100 taxis carrying five soldiers each to the front in September, 1914. Then over the bridge that spans the famous Marne river on the spot where the Marne was said to have "run red with blood," and on to Belleau Wood. One can still see some of the holes and stumps of trees and the barbed wire. In Belleau Wood is the American cemetery. I was proud of the United States when I saw this beautiful place which they have purchased as a last resting place for the

All along the road we passed cemeteries—the French graves marked with white wooden crosses, the German with black wooden crosses, and the Italian with white stone crosses. There are parts of old houses shattered and many red roofs which were new on other houses along the road.

We passed through Chateau Thierry, through Dormans where the famous "Rock of the Marne" held and on through Rheims where we visited the famous cathedral. From Rheims to Hill 108 which we climbed and looked down into the immense crater. I picked French poppies on the slope of the hill. On the road of Chemina des Dames we saw the dugout that was the headquarters of Von Hindenburg. It was made of concrete about two feet thick and had rooms leading from it underneath the ground.

Through Soissons which was badly damaged by the war but is now almost rebuilt. The French have replanted much of their forests that were damaged by the war and except that the trees are small one would never suspect that anything but peace reigned there.

At Compiègne we saw the railroad car in which the Armistice was signed. Through Senlis where the black Senegalese troops from Africa with their turbans and flowing robes are stationed. They were brought from Africa to fight in the war and are still in France. Past Le Bourget field where Lindbergh landed and on to Paris again.

Paris would not be complete without shopping and I must say that the shops are lovely and tempting. Finally we had to bid Paris good bye and started for Cherbourg where we took our steamer bound for Montreal.

GENERAL ELECTRIC FULL RANGE RADIO

ANY HOUR of the day or evening, you can find your favorite type of program with the General Electric Full Range Radio. If no near station is broadcasting it, your General Electric reaches out to the East, often as far as the Atlantic coast in the evening, far to the North or South, for it. This set brings it in clearly and distinctly with mellow, rich tones. • Such is the power of General Electric Full Range Radio

- Its Full Range Sensitivity penetrates staggering distances;
- Its Full Range Selectivity brings hairline separation of stations;
- Its Full Range Tone reproduces each musical note, every vocal inflection, naturally, perfectly.
