THEY PUT IT ACROSS.

WERE the business men of Heppner justified in their faith which made the staging of this year's Rodec possible?

It took not a little courage in face of disconcerting circumstances for these men to go ahead with the venture. It looked almost as if the odds were too great. But by following the cue of President McNamer, that by "cutting their cloth" according to the times, he thought have a better time of it than those it could be put across, they pro-

Expenses were cut wherever possible. But everyone worked with the idea of making as good a show as possible. Business men did their own decorating as well as the street decorating. Little was lost in effectiveness by this method while a considerable saving was

The show itself went off with smoothness and dispatch. It was a good show—many were heard to say it was the best ever staged. A few events of past years which added greatly to the cost were not msised. There was plenty of entertainment without them.

Receipts were necessarily short. That disclosure leads the New York Times to remark that one to cut the cost of entertainment to the people. They did this by eliminating the grandstand charge. It was not expected, either, that many people would attend more than one This proved largely to be the

It is uncertain whether receipts were sufficient to meet all expenses. But it is certain that the show brought a large number of people together in Heppner, and provided them with good entertainment. That is what the business men had in mind when they grabbed the bull by the horns and said, "Let's go!" That is the kind of spirit it takes take the count; and the surest way of taking the count is to lay down.

HEPPNER HAS A BAND.

EVERYONE'S mighty proud of the Heppner school band, and justly so, after its commendable showing during the Rodeo. True, the organization is new, and the so do small town business men, students composing it are not yet but they are trifling compared with to be classed with professional mu-sicians. But considering the fact that very few of the members were in the least acquainted with their instruments before the band was organized last fall, their excellent showing was not short of remark-It was a surprise to a great

Acts 14:8-23 Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

From Antioch in Pisidia Paul and Barnabas went to Iconium and the experiences at the previous station were repeated. At first there was marked interest on the part of both Jews and Greeks. All too soon jealousy again led to serious persecutions and the evangelists were forced to go further in carrying on their work of evangelizing. Let it be noted that at no time did the troubles they met cause them to abandon their programs.

Lystra was the next place for work. Here preaching seems to have been in the open and the usual crowd of cripples and beggars were part of the audience. Interest centers in a man who had been a cripple from birth. As Paul told of the Sept. 12th and 13th, at Hotel Hepppower to heal on the part of this Messiah, who had been crucified and risen from the dead, the help-less man saw the first gleam of WESTLAND IRRIGATION DISTRICT hope that had appeared thus far on his horizon of life. His eagerness and faith were evidenced in his face, which when Paul noted brot forth the maazing command "Stand upright on thy feet." Forthwith there was a leaping into fullness of physical strength and soundness of

The townspeople could explain the result only by thinking that their gods had come among them. called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul was named Mercury. Tradi-tion says that Paul was baldheaded, short, bowlegged and had bad eyes. It was Barnabas who must have been fine in stature to be taken for their chief god. At once the priests of these supposed gods planned to the offer a sacrifice and oxen were is brought for the purpose. Paul would not accept any false praise and it was only with difficulty that he made them accept the fact that he was just an ordinary man, but with a message that told about the only God, and His Son their Sa-

many people, and a very pleasant surprise.

If indications are read correctly Heppner is beginning to awaken to the value of such an organization The saving made on band music for the Rodeo alone has opened the eyes of many to its possibilities. There will be other occasions when band will be required, and still ther occasions when the band, though not required, will be on and to enliven the spirits.

That's what it means to have a band at home. And more, it means that musical talent is being developed that, aside from enlarging the entertainment possibilities of the community, enlarges the scope of interest and opportunity of the boys and girls providing the talent. It is a real asset, not to be measured solely in dollars and cents.

Snappily attired in white uni-forms topped off with red berets, both boys and girls of the band were the envy of many other boys and girls who before had shown ittle interest in band work. Many f these are now becoming inter sted and want to get into the and. That is a healthy sign.

Harold Buhman, the instructor, has shown great patience and worked hard to bring the band to its present state. The good showing made during the Rodeo would not have been possible had it not been for his carrying on the work during the summer. The band boys and girls have also worked hard. All are entitled to the commendation of the community.

who live in the big cities that there isn't room to put them all down here. But one of the things that make our city cousins mad is that we small-town and country folk have so much more to say about the government of our state and of the nation than they do.

A writer in a recent issue of The American Mercury points out that one voter in Echols County, Georgia, has as much to say about the State's affairs on election day as 35 voters in Atlanta. Atlanta has 11 percent of Georgia's population and pays 24 percent of the ad val-orem taxes, but has only 1.4 percent of the members of the lower house of the state legisalture.

voter in Putnam County, less than thirty miles north of the big city, has as much to say at Albany as five voters in New York itself.

to put across a Rodeo, or anything not according to locally and not according to population. And, else. Nobody's licked until they on the whole, we see no reason to ployment. For one thing, the city dweller has to have cash in his pocket or starve. We know many good citizens who don't handle as much cash in a year as thousands of city folks spend for a month's house rent, but we haven't noticed any of them starving. And the few who have had hard luck and have had to have help from their neighbors haven't had to sacrifice their self-respect in accepting a "lift" over the temporary rough going.

As far as we can find out, the small towns of the whole United States have got along better thru these past two years of depression than the big cities have done. And if there is anything really worth having in city life that we haven't got right here at home, we don't know what it is, On the whole, perhaps, it's just as well that the cities don't run everything, so long as people have to eat and we country folk have to raise their food for them.
