

Local Happenings

Hynd brothers of Rose Lawn ranch, Sand Hollow, have raised a fine crop of fruit this season, this being especially true of their apricots and peaches which turned off a heavy crop of excellent quality. David Hynd states that they were greatly surprised at this, for just at blossom time there were heavy frosts and it was thought both crops were entirely destroyed, but this proved not to be the case. The peaches are of the Elberta variety and the orchard is now coming into full bearing, this season producing more fruit than was needed for home consumption, even though much is put up each year for supplying the various camps of the company. We know the peaches were of excellent quality, as Mr. Hynd remembered this office with a nice box of the Elbertas when he was in town the first of the week and passing around a treat to his numerous friends.

Chas. Allinger visited in the city Wednesday from his home at Ione. Mr. Allinger returned home on Sunday from his trip east, and reports that he had a very enjoyable time, taking in a great many points of interest, and also noting that there were few, if any, evidences of returning prosperity in the east and middle west. One point visited was Detroit and Mr. Allinger found it very quiet in that city, no building going on and the automobile industry running on greatly reduced schedules of both labor and time, the Ford factory just now working about one-fourth of its normal capacity. Here Mr. Allinger crossed over to Ontario, Canada, and the same conditions, owing to the general depression, prevailed. He found people, generally, taking the situation in a philosophical way and making no complaint, the feeling being that a return to better conditions cannot be very far away.

Jon Conder, who has been spending the past year or more at Eugene where he was attending school and adding to his musical education, is now located at Pendleton, where he will remain and take up teaching of piano. In company with Loren Davidson, he visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Conder, in this city on Saturday. We understand Jon will be organist in the First Christian church at Pendleton, where he played Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Conder going over from here to hear him.

A goodly shower of rain in Heppner Sunday evening sweetened up the atmosphere a lot and weather conditions have been much cooler since. Farmers and stockmen are hoping that the fall rains will not be long delayed.

The Methodist missionary society will hold their regular meeting at the church parlors on next Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 15. A full attendance of the membership is desired at it will be the time for election of officers.

Mrs. Milton Fisher, nee Gladys Lane, was a week-end guest in this city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Clark. She returned to her home on Tuesday night's train.

James Gentry was informed this week of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. F. Daniels at their home in Boise, Idaho, on Sunday. Mrs. Gentry is with her daughter there.

John Bellenbrock, Monument stockman, was a visitor in this city on Tuesday. He has been under the weather some of late and was feeling none too good while here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Keithley were over from their Pendleton home Saturday and Sunday, being house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Jones.

Mrs. Josie Jones of Pendleton spent Monday in this city, looking after property interests here.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Borg of Portland took in part of the Rodeo while visiting relatives and friends here over Monday. Mr. Borg is a former Heppner jeweler, and Mrs. Borg is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McCarty of this city. It had been several years since they last visited the old home town and they found many strange faces intermingled with the old familiar ones.

Henry Happold, Dr. C. W. Barr and Postmaster W. W. Smead motored to East Lake for a week-end fishing trip. The weather turned cold on Sunday night and the gentlemen found they were not prepared for such weather, and the outing was not greatly enjoyed from the fisherman's standpoint. It was snowing when they left the lake.

Mrs. Lena White and daughters Mary and Frances departed Monday for Caldwell, Idaho, where they will reside during the winter. The young ladies were graduates from Heppner high school last spring, and they will enter the Idaho state college at Caldwell at the beginning of the fall term.

Mrs. Anna Heiny, teacher in several of the county schools for a number of years, this year has charge of the Matteson school. The school started Monday and Mrs. Heiny was on hand after spending several weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. O. Ferguson, in this city.

Andy Hayes, former Heppner citizen and now engaged in the hotel business at Spokane, was a visitor here during the Rodeo and also spent a few days at the Jim Hayes ranch on Rhea creek with his relatives. He returned to Spokane the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dutton and daughter, Miss Nancy, and Mrs. Ida Dutton came up from their Portland homes Thursday and in part of the Rodeo while visiting old friends. They were guests at the J. J. Wightman home.

One group of Hardman folks who came to town Tuesday after school books included Mrs. J. W. Stevens and daughter, Mrs. F. E. McDaniel and James McDaniel. They reported the Hardman school off to a good start Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Frye are visiting Mr. Frye's mother, Mrs. Olive Frye, this week, having arrived from their home in San Francisco on Friday. Mr. Frye has been living in the California city for the past three years.

Several members of the E. R. Merritt family, former Heppner residents, were here for the Rodeo, coming over from Wapato, Wash., their present home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Ayers were Pine City folks in the city on Wednesday, bringing some produce from their garden which was disposed of here.

See Norma Shearer in A FREE SOUL, from the book by Adela Rogers St. Johns, Star Theater next Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lon Wattenburger of lower Butter creek were visitors in Heppner on Tuesday.

Farmers of Oregon Now Plan Fall Forage Crops

With harvest completed in most parts of the state, many farmers are now considering the question of what to plant this fall for forage purposes.

If one were able at this time to predict the type of winter in store for Oregon, this question might be more easily answered, says George R. Hyslop, chief of farm crops at Oregon State college. In cases where the winter season is at all severe, following an unusually dry summer such as this has been, it is not at all uncommon for considerable quantities of alfalfa to be winter-killed, he says, particularly in sections that are normally irrigated but have had no late water supply.

The safest way, probably, would be to plan on the normal amount of fall forage crops, Professor Hyslop believes. Among those planted in the fall for hay and silage purposes in western Oregon, he calls attention to the vetches. For sweet and reasonably well-drained soils he recommends common vetch; for soil that is heavier, slightly wetter or slightly sour, Hungarian vetch is the most successful. With any of these vetches, Hyslop says, it is well to sow a companion crop, and for this purpose common gray oats is probably the best with either of the vetches, if it is to be used for hay. For silage, winter barley usually makes the best companion crop, and for real early green feed rye and vetch is the best combination.

Austrian winter field peas is another crop coming into wide use in Oregon, and although primarily a seed crop here, it is used for all types of forage, such as hay, silage, soiling and pasture. The quality and feeding value is considered about equal to good vetch hay. A recent bulletin published by the Oregon Experiment station, entitled "Austrian Winter Field Peas in Oregon," goes into detail as to the development of this crop, its cultivation and value.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—
CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads. When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging. Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

OREGON'S CONTINUED PROGRESS IS DEPENDENT UPON ITS RAILROADS

UNION PACIFIC
OREGON

$1,361,196.49 IN TAXES CONTRIBUTED IN 1930 TO THE PROSPERITY AND PROGRESS OF OREGON

IN ADDITION to this large sum, paid out from its earnings for taxes in Oregon, the Union Pacific distributes an immense sum for salaries and wages. During 1930 alone over nine million dollars paid to 4,965 Union Pacific employees found its way into circulation through the avenues of Trade and Commerce within the State. Over 20,000 Oregon people derive their support from Union Pacific.

Oregon's progress began with the coming of the railroads. Her future growth is dependent upon adequate railroad transportation. The kind of transportation service that Oregon needs can be provided only if Oregon people support the railroads.
