W. C. T. U. NOTES.

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter. In a recent "open letter," Augustus Busch asserted that nothing would contribute more to relieve the unemployment situation and restore business confidence and stability than the legalizing of 4 per cent beer. The New York Times of July 20 published replies from economists and educators to an inquiry sent out by the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation as to their opinion of the proposition. With only one or two exceptions they declared the proposal unwarranted or ridiculous.

Dr. Geo. B. Cutten, President of Colgate University, said: "Mr. Busch's open letter is so foolish that it seems to be unnecessary to make any answer to it. If Mr. Busch were paying for all the beer that would be sold that would be a different proposition, but of course the payment has to come from somewhere, and that means it has to come from the pockets of the people. Mr. Busch has not explained how an additional tax at the expense of the people, which unites them for efficiency, can aid prosperity."

C. S. Marsh, Dean of the School of Business Administration, Buffalo, New York, University, said: "The statement of Mr. Busch is typical of the hokum issued by the advocate of restored booze. Re-opening the breweries would, of course, do something to relieve unemployment, but his other claims are nonsense. In European countries beer has not improved business confidence and stability, and it has never been noted for its contribution to public health, morals and welfare."

William H. Spencer, Dean of the School of Commerce and Administration, University of Chicago, said: "It is incredible that the return of 4 per cent beer should have any effect for good on the business and economic situation."

C. E. Griffin, Dean of School of Business Administration, University of Michigan, said: "I believe that a restoration of beer to its former legal status would have a bad effect upon business stability. Whatever evils may have accompanied the prohibition law, it is my opinion that on the score of industrial efficiency the results have been salutary. Business cannot in my judgment be restored by the adoption of a measure which gives promise of impairing business efficiency and reducing the purchasing power of consumers."

In connection with these replies it might be well to note that Great Smedley Butler in an article in the Christian Herald comes out squarely for the retention of prohibition. Evidently, he has not forgotten that the brewers insisted upon using grain, sugar and coal when the nation was economizing on food stuffs and when schools and hospitals were cold from lack of fuel in the early days of the war. The brewers were slackers. Patriotism was not in their vocabulary.
