PAUL IN JERUSALEM

Really romantic incidents about the third missionary journey of Paul are found in Acts, chapter 20 and 21. Follow with him or him and a second turn from Corinth. You will not go to sleep as did the man at Troas who fell out of the window. A final good bye was said to the Ephesian husband and wife, Plaintiffs, elders at Miletus, for Paul was aware that he was advancing to his own death when he proceeded to Jerusalem. Keep track of the "we" passages, for then Dr. Luke, the author of Acts, was with Paul. Plenty of trouble awaited Paul at Jerusalem. The people scarcely said "thank you" for the fine offering he brought for the poor saints there before they told him of the criticism scandal-mongers were delight-

To offset this Paul agreed to undertake a vow and pay the cost for others making a similar vow. While they were in the Temple courts the cry was raised that Paul had brought others than Jews into the sacred area. Then there was an uproar indeed and soldiers rushed from the castle of Antonia to rescue

As the prisoner was being drag-ged up the stairs into the castle he saw the fine opportunity to speak once more in behalf of Jesus Christ. Here was the crowd surging about and the stairs furnished an ideal pulpit. Paul rehearsed his own conversion and the hissing broke out again and Paul was taken within to be examined by scourging. But just as the lash was about to descend on his bare back, Paul ask-ed a question that had a startling effect. He asked: "It is lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and uncondemned?" 22:25 Read all the record and especially about the vision of commendation encouragement and promise that came the next night, 23:11.
