

BOARDMAN

By RACHEL JOHNSON.

About ten inches of snow had covered the ground in this locality, until Monday when the warm wind melted most of it.

The Ladies Aid annual bazaar held Friday evening in the school house was well attended in spite of the cold weather. Mrs. Morgan, chairman of the dinner committee, and her helpers served a lovely dinner in the cafeteria. The menu was: corned beef and cabbage, or salmon loaf, apple and celery salad, pumpkin pie and coffee. Mrs. Macomber, chairman of the fancy work booth, had a number of pretty aprons, dresses and embroidery work. The rummage sale was in charge of Mrs. Gillespie and was a popular booth. The candy booth, under the supervision of Mrs. Allen, had a lovely assortment of candies. The ever-popular country store was an attraction to both young and old. This was in charge of Mrs. Shannon. Mrs. Sundsten was in charge of the archery booth; this is always fascinating to the crowd. Mrs. Dillabough was in charge of the dining room. The room and tables were prettily decorated with flowers and wreaths.

The high school play, a delightful comedy in three acts, "All of a Sudden Peggy," by Ernest Denny, will be given in the school auditorium December 18th. The characters are well developed and each has a style of his own. The antics of Willard Baker as the "spider-mad" scientist, Tod Anthony Crackenthorpe, are screaming. The hauteur and dignity of his mother, Lady Crackenthorpe, afford a distinct contrast to the young and impulsive Peggy O'Mara. Dorothy Compton plays the part of Lady Crackenthorpe and Mary Chaffee that of Peggy. Cella Partlow is an Irish widow, Mrs. O'Mara. Jimmy Keppel, the leading man, is played by George Wicklander. Jimmy's sister, Millicent, is Elsie Wilson. Dale Cox plays the part of Major Archie Phillips, an ex-cavalryman, and brother of Lady Crackenthorpe. The butlers are Delbert Mackan and Marvin Ransier. The plot is pleasantly complicated and is interesting until the end. The cast is working hard and hopes to see a large crowd.

Advantages of Barley Are Told by Crops Specialist

Barley production has been steadily increasing in western Oregon and just as steadily decreasing in eastern Oregon over the last 20 years, a comparison on census figures made by D. D. Hill, associate agronomist at the Oregon Experiment station, shows.

In 1920 western Oregon produced more than a million bushels of barley, after a steady increase in acreage that was most noticeable in the last 10 years. In eastern Oregon, on the other hand, the census shows that in 1909 there were 100,000 acres of barley grown, while in 1929 this had shrunk to 43,000 acres, though the total cereal acreage east of the mountains had increased close to 225,000 acres.

Mr. Hill points out that there is now considerable interest, and rightly so, in feeding cheap wheat to livestock. On the other hand, if grain is to be grown expressly for this livestock, Mr. Hill calls attention to the fact that in both eastern and western Oregon barley will normally produce more pounds of feed per acre than wheat.

"For example, at Moro, Mariout barley will outyield Hybrid 128 wheat," says Hill. At the Union station Trebi barley beats the best wheat, and at Pendleton figures show Trebi outyielding the best wheat by 300 pounds per acre. In western Oregon barley will beat either wheat or oats on fertile, well drained upland soil.

"Feeding trials with barley and corn show that 100 pounds of barley is equal to 90 to 95 pounds of corn. But the corn usually shipped in here from the east usually arrives with 15 to 18 per cent moisture, while barley often has a moisture content of 8 to 9 per cent, so that it equals corn pound for pound in such cases."

Parched or toasted? No, sir!

CAMELS are FRESH!

THE bedrock of Camel popularity is the inherently fine quality of the tobaccos that go into our cigarette.

They are never parched or toasted—the Reynolds method of scientifically applying heat guarantees against that.

These tobaccos are notably mild, full-mellow, delicately flavored by nature—the finest Turkish and mild, sun-ripened Domestic tobaccos that money can buy.

That's why we say Camels are made fresh to start with—and why the Camel Humidor Pack can bring them fresh to you, in prime smoking condition.

To safeguard the essential goodness of these fine tobaccos we exercise every care to conserve their natural moisture and natural flavors.

If you want to know what a blessing that means in unalloyed smoke-enjoyment, switch to Camels for just one day—then leave them—if you can.
