CAN IT BE DONE? TWENTY years of hard work was entailed in gaining the united support of the states of Oregon and Washington...

Construction of the road previously was only held up by the large cost occasioned by much heavy rock work.

When the long struggle to obtain construction of the road had apparently reached a successful end, a united public sentiment in its favor had apparently been welded except for a single group of individuals.

Opposition of the Pendletonians was no less insistent after the Snoqualmie pass road to Seattle had been finished, and travelling time lowered between eastern Washington points and Seattle under that required to reach Portland via Pendleton though Portland was immediately weakened to the importance of completing the Walla-Walla cut-off in order to gain an advantage in travel time over Seattle.

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for February 25. JESUS RAISES LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD.

Human interest stories attract usual attention here is one that is rich in thrill. The scenes are laid in the region beyond Jordan called Perea, where Jesus is in the midst of an intensive ministry with His disciples, and also in Bethany just a few miles from Jerusalem, where still exists the traditional site of the home of Lazarus.

Announcement of the death of Lazarus is brought by messenger to Him while in Perea, possibly twenty miles distant.

Martha, the resourceful, meets Jesus outside the town and is comforted in just telling Him all about it. Thankful should we be when we have a real friend to whom we can unburden our heart in time of distress.

Abruptly we turn to the Golden Text for the sublime truth. "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he dies, yet shall he live."

to force natural laws. And then Mr. Aldrich was named to the Oregon state highway commission. With absolute disregard for the good faith of the former commission in getting the cut-off road started, and ignoring every interest in the road aside from that of the selfish Pendleton group, he obtained postponement of construction of the road on a mere pretense.

He said the proposed survey brought part of the road below the water level of the proposed Umatilla Rapids project. That is Mr. Aldrich's stock argument. He had used it over and over again when it became necessary to throw cold water on agitation in favor of the cut-off. And what a myth!

There is absolutely no assurance that the Umatilla Rapids project will ever be built. At best it is years in the future.

RELIEF FOR THE SMALL FARMER. Autocaster Service.

FARMERS who find themselves short of cash or credit with which to finance their 1932 crops can borrow money under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, which provides that fifty million dollars is made available through the Secretary of Agriculture for crop-financing loans to farmers, and much more than that will be available if necessary.

These loans, Secretary Hyde announces, will be on an average basis and not more than $400 may be borrowed by any one farmer. This money must be used for the purchase of seed and the cultivation and harvesting of crops, and loans are to be secured by liens upon growing crops.

We think this is a pretty good arrangement for two or three reasons. In the first place, it is cheap financing for farmers, the interest rate being only five and one-half percent. In the second place, it is likely to result in teaching a good many farmers how to use credit in the same way a business man uses it. The kind of loans with which farmers are most familiar are mortgage loans on the security of their land. And if farmers, generally, take advantage of this process, it will distribute a large amount of working money throughout all of the agricultural regions, and every dollar so distributed will contribute many times its own value to the restoration of business activity and the benefit of the community in which it circulates.

STOCK MARKET GAMBLING. Autocaster Service.

WE THINK we are perfectly safe in saying that the business depression has "scrapped bottom" and that the upswing has begun. It is certain that there is a much greater feeling of confidence among manufacturers, business men and bankers than there was a month ago. The remedial legislation which has been enacted at Washington has already had a deep psychological effect upon the business and financial world.

The best proof that these efforts to put a stop to the process of inflation are regarded by men who know about such things as being effective, is the fact that men and institutions of great wealth who have been holding back their funds waiting to be sure that the bottom had been reached, are now actively investing again. But on the heels of these investors follows an army of speculative sharks, whose activities may succeed in undoing the beginnings of restored confidence. These are the traders who rush in whenever the shares of any corporation show signs of strength, and buy merely to sell again as soon as they can make a dollar or two profit.

The New York Stock Exchange is an important institution, in that it furnishes the only open market into which anyone who wants to buy or sell securities can go to make his sales or purchases. But a large part of the trading on the Exchange is pure gambling. These gamblers care nothing about the welfare of the nation; they seek only to line their own pockets. And it is too bad that whenever there are encouraging signs of restored confidence that they should come in and kill it by first running the market up and then, when they sell to take profits, putting it down again.

We believe that these stock gamblers have done more to retard the resumption of normal business than any other one influence. We hope that the nation as a whole will not continue to regard the day-to-day fluctuations of security prices on the Stock Exchange as reflecting anything more than the operations of gamblers, but we are afraid that too many people think the nation's prosperity is dependent upon the price of stocks, which have no more relation to the actual values of the properties behind them today, when they are absurdly low, than they had in 1929, when they were ridiculously too high.

The Spirit of 1917 By Albert T Reid

The FAMILY DOCTOR by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

SOME SIMPLE RULES.

A letter reached me from a friend in the great state of Texas this week, a good, warm-hearted message, breathing the generous spirit of the south.

After his words of praise for my humble effort, he just wondered what would be good for an acid stomach. He is a young man, very diligent in his work on farm or ranch; in fact I will wager that he doesn't take time to properly masticate his food, so keen was his desire to get back to the field. Here, in part, is some of the advice I gave him:

First, if a tobacco-chewer, cut out chewing for a long time before meals. Save the saliva for digestion; it neutralizes the excess of acid; that's what it is there for—not to be spat out with tobacco juice, leaving the acid to do its harm.

Second, keep the bowels moving regularly with a good preparation of magnesium. Then, take time to eat—to chew the food thoroughly.

Third, use "smooth," bland, soft-cooked food. No hard, rough, irritating thing. I am converted to the smooth diet; am rebelling most earnestly against all harsh, coarse, indigestible foods.

I urged the well-balanced diet—a portion of most all the good things to eat—no excess of any. A good breakfast, a well-rounded dinner at noon. A mild bit of refreshment for supper, when the body is tired from the labor of the day.

Many of the teachers of the Heppner school faculty took advantage of the holiday on Washington's birthday to visit out-of-town points. A number went to Portland, with five accompanying F. W. Turner in his car.

A survey to determine cost of production of honey in Oregon, long sought by the organized beekeepers of the state, has now been started under a cooperative arrangement between Oregon State college and the U. S. department of agriculture.

BUD'n' BUB Bud is Well Represented By ED KRESSY

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter. The wets are making a systematic attack upon the 18th amendment. They are banking upon their ability to deceive the twenty million young voters who have arrived at voting age since the amendment was adopted and who know nothing about the old licensed saloon.

One of the assertions of the wets, upon which they have hung all the changes possible and upon which they again and again repeat the changes, is that "the 18th amendment is not and never has been the will of the American people." They assert that it was sneaked into the constitution unawares. This is an unmitigated falsehood. More than one hundred years ago the first nation-wide effort was made to oppose the liquor traffic by a conference of delegates from all parts of the country held in Boston.

The wet claim that the amendment was slipped into the constitution while the soldiers were overseas is pure "bunk." The members of congress who voted to submit the amendment were all elected prior to the time when we entered the war, and many of them were elected on that issue. At no time during the war was there more than ten per cent of the voting strength excluded by war-time necessity from voting, and at least half of this ten per cent was from dry states. Moreover, the amendment was ratified by 46 out of the 48 states, being a higher percentage than voted in favor of the original constitution.

The question as to whether the 18th amendment is now the will of the people can not be settled by opinions. The wets have a right to test it out if they wish. The constitution provides the way to do this. Let them proceed by that method. Instead of following the constitution, they are trying to put over their program by the method of nullification. Every honest opponent of prohibition, who claims to be a good citizen, should insist that the repeal be brought about by legal methods. Let us be good citizens, and let us be honest in dealing with this question.

Wheat Market Firm In Face of Inactivity

Wheat prices during the week reflected a firm quiet tone, in spite of the dearth of new business, says Portland Grain Exchange for week ending February 20.

Most wheat traders are hesitant about expressing any hope of a substantial increase in values, due to their having been disappointed so many times during the last two years. Most of these same traders feel that prices at present levels discount almost anything and it is this waiting attitude that stifles initiative and dulls markets.

Locally there was no business with California and export business continues far out of line. The condition of the growing crop is excellent and there remains plenty of old crop to fill any demand that might arise between now and new crop.

Portland Futures show net gains for the week as follows: May up 7-8c; July up 1-1-4c and September up 1-1-8c per bushel.
