The debate was held to throw light on one of the projects being considered by the board of direct-ors of the Lions club, and the sides were allotted the participants re-gardless of personal beliefs with the idea of establishing the feasibility of such a project, Mr. Smith argued for the affirmative that the establishment of such a day with facilities provided for the free exchange of articles being of good will between town and country, and that there is a demand for the establishment of such a day. At the present time his office sends monthly bulletins to granges and trade centers of the county which includes a list of articles that farmers have to sell or exchange, This service is in large demand, he said. He also cited the free service offered by the Gazette Times of publishing free of charge notices of articles and commodities wished conducted, working a hardship on merhants thereby. No vote was cast as to who won the debate

Mr. Wicklander spoke briefly on the work of the grange, giving as the reason for his visit to Heppner at the time in company with Mrs. Lundell, the establishment of a new grange in the Lena district. He said that the eastern Oregon district of which he is organizer ment of any district in the state He called attention to the fact that anyone sympathetic to the interests of agriculture could be a member and urged Heppner business men to consider the matter of aligning with the organization.
