Production Staff; Business Manager, Claud Brashers; House Manager, Carl Lindeken; Property Manager, Elwayne Liallalen; Costume Manager, Opal Finn; Stage Manager, Joel Engelman; Property Woman, Margaret Ely; Director, Miss Marguerite Mausery.

The Betsy Boss Sewing circle met for the first time April 6. All members were present. After the meeting was called to order, each member made a report on how much they had done. Two members, Margaret Lindeken and Charlotte McCabe, have completed their first project.

The Ione Viewpoint came from the press last week under new management. Marquis Greenwall, an Ione boy, is the present owner and editor. Assisting him in the work is Miss Veda Eubanks who was also assistant to Raymond Crowder, former editor.

Raymond Crowder left Ione last week, going to McMinnville where his family is located, and to other valley points. He plans on returning before the opening of the fishing season, and Judge Robinson and Blain Blackwell will join him on a fishing expedition into the Deschutes country.

Betty and Cyril Trevett have been enjoying a visit with their mother, Mrs. Walter Trevett, of Condon. The two young people are making their home with their aunt, Mrs. Scott Brown on Rhea creek this school year and are attending school in Ione.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ball and sons have moved to the Ray Brown ranch near Boardman. The Ball family have been living in Ione for the past few months.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom King of Milwaukie are guests at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd King, in upper Ione. Mr. and Mrs. King, Sr., are former residents of this city, and have many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Rietmann are the proud parents of an 8-1-4 pound daughter, born April 5 in a Heppner hospital. The young lady has been named Ruby Ann. Mrs. Rietmann plans on returning to her home the last of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Balsiger have received the announcement of the birth of a daughter April 5 to their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Koehring of Indianapolis, Indiana. This is the third child born to Mr. and Mrs. Koehring.

On Thursday last Mr. and Mrs. Hal O. Ely received the announcement of the birth of a son to their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Ely of Morgan. The young man weighed seven pounds. The mother and baby are being cared for at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Pierrot, in Portland.

On Wednesday of last week Franklin Ely was painfully injured while engaged in plowing on his ranch near Morgan. A wild mule which he had in his team overstepped a tug and Mr. Ely went to the animal's assistance and while thus engaged received a severe blow on the face. He does not know just what did happen. He can remember stepping in among the horses and mules and the next he knew he was some distance from the place of the accident walking behind his plow and team. He went to Heppner for medical attention. The x-ray showed no broken bones.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cochran and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Brenner Reese, returned Saturday to their home in Yakima after a pleasant week's visit here with relatives and friends. While they were here the deal was closed whereby Hal O. Ely became owner of the John Cochran residence on Second street. Mr. and Mrs. Ely will move into their newly acquired home as soon as the present occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Blain Blackwell, can find a suitable place to rent.

A pleasant quilting party was held at the Edward A. Lindeken home Friday afternoon. Ladies present were Mrs. J. W. Howk, Mrs. J. E. Swanson, Mrs. M. E. Cotter, Mrs. Paul O'Meara, Mrs. Alice McNabb and Mrs. Walter Corley. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. Lana Padberg was called to Arlington last Thursday by the serious illness of her daughter, Mrs. Guy Cason. Mrs. John Bryson also went to the river city to assist in the care of the patient. At last reports Mrs. Cason was much improved.

Members of the Odd Fellows lodge and their families enjoyed a "pinochle" party Saturday evening at their hall on Main street.

Fred Rood of Hillsboro, administrator of the Fannie O. Rood estate, was transacting business in Ione Saturday.

Roy Lieualen has leased the ranch south of Ione owned by Judge Calvin L. Sweek of Pendleton.

Mrs. Bert Mason took Junior Mason, Denward Bergvinn, Eugene and Harry Normoye, all members of the Ione Boy Scout patrol, to Portland Friday that they might attend the Boy Scout Circus which was staged Friday and Saturday nights at the horse show arena in North Portland. Four thousand Scouts from Portland and the surrounding counties of Oregon and Washington participated in the entertainment, which was made up of scout activities and comedy features. Our boys especially enjoyed the drill on horseback by sixteen scouts, the exhibition of the Sea Scouts, the first aid work and the demonstration of engineering. Saturday morning the boys visited Terminal No. 4, and in the afternoon went to the Forestry building, Washington Park and the air port. On the way down to the city they stopped at Multnomah Falls and took time to climb to the top of the water falls. On the way home they visited the fish hatchery at Bonneville. The party reached home Sunday night after more than two happy days crowded full of sightseeing which was both educational and entertaining. While in the city Mrs. Mason and the four boys were guests of Mrs. Mason's mother, Mrs. Adelia Godfrey.

CHURCH OF CHRIST. JOEL R. BENTON, Minister. Mrs. Wm. Peelson, Director of Music. Bible School 8:45 A. M. Morning Worship 10 o'clock Senior and Junior C. E. 7 o'clock Evening Worship 8 o'clock Choir rehearsal, Wed. eve. 8 o'clock Church Night, Thurs. eve. 8 o'clock

When Morning Comes. "Weeping may endure for a night; but joy cometh in the morning." Psalm 30:5. When morning comes. And it will come! Morning will come! There never was a night yet that was not followed by morning.

It may be night for us now—a night of some sore trial or sorrow. But be brave of heart and of good cheer; morning is coming. Sunset is surely and inevitably followed by SUNRISE!

"Weeping may endure for a night. There are nights that are full of sorrow and tears. There are nights of worry and anxiety. There are nights of blasted hopes and of unfulfilled ambitions. Most of us know what this means. What disappointments, what heartaches, what weeping, the night has meant for some of us.

But what of the MORNING? Yes we know what that means, too. We know what weeping for a night means; and we know, too, the joy that "cometh in the morning."

WHEN MORNING COMES! That means deliverance. That means new hope. That means new confidence and courage. That means a new day—the brighter passage of Isaiah: "Watchman, what of the night?" encouraged us to look forward. When morning comes. That means the reward of faith; God's answer to the heart that trusted in darkness.

But the coming of morning does not mean that another night will not come. We recall the passage in Isaiah: "Watchman, what of the night?" The watchman said: "The morning cometh and also the night." Morning—and another night. Sunrise and sunset; sunset and sunrise. Morning and night; night and morning—so runs our life on earth.

Will there be no end to this? Thank God, yes! There is coming that great morning when night shall be no more! Then the weeping we have endured for the night will be forgotten in the joy that shall be ours in that eternal morning. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

If you have not now a Church home, will you come and worship with us? Will you come and worship with us in the fellowship and worship of our Church services and Bible school. For the coming Lord's Day the sermon topics are: For the morning service, "Finding God." For the evening service, "Tomorrow's That Never Come."

Shall we ever approach to an understanding of Jesus? Will such a thing ever be? Jesus, that name which is above all other names, a name at which every knee should bow. In Him are depths which no human has ever sounded. Heights are there which no human mind has ever scaled. We stand before Him in awe and reverence and humility and our prayer is: "Light, more light while time shall last. 'Till shadows vanish in the Light of Lights." How shall we approach to an understanding of Jesus? A mere intellectual approach to the Master has never brought a man to a full understanding of Jesus.

"Follow me," Jesus said, and he chose 12 men to be with Him. "If ye be willing," He said, "willing to do God's will, ye shall know the doctrine." The disciples had an experience with Him. They followed Him in action and in life. Out of such relationships love sprang and so it will to us. He is our Saviour and High Priest and Friend. We can know Him in our heart of hearts. "If any man shall do His will, he shall know of the doctrine." John 7: 16-17.

WE DON'T REALLY VOTE FOR PRESIDENT

By CALEB JOHNSON.

On the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, which this year will fall on November 8th, the qualified voters of the United States will go to their respective polling places and vote for—what? For President and Vice-President, you'll reply.

Nothing of the kind. The next President and Vice-President of the United States will not be elected until the second Wednesday in February, 1933.

Voters will cast their ballots on November 8th for members of Congress, one in each Congressional district of the entire nation. They will vote for United States Senators—at least in thirty-two states there will be senatorial elections. They will vote for members of legislatures and for local officials, but nobody will have the privilege of voting for the President and Vice-President.

All that anyone of the 72,000,000 qualified voters of the United States can do next November will be to vote for a list of Presidential electors, or a list of Republican electors, or a list of Democratic electors, or a list of Prohibitionist or Communist or Farm-Labor, or any other list that may appear on the official ballot. If he wants to he can write in a list of names of Presidential electors that don't appear on the printed ballot at all. Any voter who wants to vote for a mixed ticket, including Republican electors, Democratic electors, and so on. But he cannot vote direct for President or Vice-President.

Perhaps that sounds like school-book stuff; that every child who has got as far as the study of the Constitution of the United States knows already. But there is a possibility that this year it may not be merely school-book stuff. For that reason it is interesting to examine the method by which we choose our President and Vice-President.

In theory, Presidential electors are bound to vote for the candidates of their respective parties nominated in the National Conventions which are to be held during the coming summer. The list of Republican candidates for Presidential electors will be headed on the ballot with the names of the nominees of the Republican National Convention, and so likewise will the Democratic list carry the names of the Democratic nominees, and so on. And, of course, there is a moral obligation on the part of each Presidential elector to vote for the candidate's name at the head of the list on which his name appears. But no elector is under any legal obligation to vote for any Presidential or Vice-Presidential nominee.

In theory, the electors are independent and entitled to use their independent individual judgments. In New York State, for example, there are forty-five Presidential electors to be chosen. It has never happened, but it might happen, that one or two or three or any number of these forty-five, although elected on one of the party tickets, might decide to vote for the candidates on one of the other tickets, or for an independent candidate. If the Democrats, for example, elected their entire list of Presidential electors, and twenty-three of the forty-five decided between election day in November and the first Wednesday in January that they preferred the Republican candidates or the Prohibition candidates, they could turn over the vote of New York State to the other party, regardless of how large a majority of individual voters had expressed themselves for a particular candidate.

Nothing like that has ever happened, and nothing like that is at all likely to happen. The electors who went contrary to their parties that way would be forever out of politics. Nobody would trust them any more. And the type of men usually nominated in state conventions as Presidential electors are a high-minded, honorable class and altogether unlikely to go contrary to the clearly expressed mandates of the voters at the polls. If anything of the sort ever happens, it would be more likely to occur in some of the states with a smaller representation in the Electoral college.

Arizona, Delaware, Nevada, New Mexico and Wyoming have only three electoral votes each. Idaho, Montana, New Hampshire, Utah and Vermont have only four each. Two or three electors in any one of these states might kick over the traces and change the entire result of the Presidential election. It does not depend in any way upon the number of popular votes cast by the voters, but does depend upon the number of Presidential electors voting for a given candidate.

A President can be, and many Presidents have been, elected and seated by a minority of the popular vote. Mr. Cleveland in 1892 got only 46 per cent of the popular vote. Mr. Wilson had 42 per cent of the popular vote in 1912 and 49 per cent of it in 1916. But those candidates carried the larger states with the largest number of electoral votes, and what elects the President is a majority of the total number of electors.

The electors of each state meet at their State Capitals on the first Wednesday in January and record their votes, which are taken by messengers to Washington and counted by the House of Representatives, which then declares the candidate having received the largest number of electoral votes to be elected President.

If no candidate has a majority of the electoral votes, however, the House of Representatives itself has then the power to elect the President, and it doesn't have to choose from among the party nominees, but can go outside of them and elect anybody who is qualified. That too, has never happened. On the two or three occasions early in our history when the election was thrown into the House of Representatives, the leading party candidate was the one eventually chosen. But it might happen.

Judge J. M. Hanley of North Dakota, has started a movement for independent electoral tickets in as many states as possible, in the belief that there is a great mass of voters who would under no circumstances want to support Democratic nominees and who will be opposed to the reelection of Mr. Hoover, who seems certain to be the Republican nominee. If such independent lists of electors can be set up in strategically located states and should be elected, there might be a sufficient number of independent electors, so chosen, to prevent either of the major party candidates from getting a majority in the Electoral college. And that is what Judge Hanley and a group of anti-Hoover Republicans are aiming at. They want to throw the election of 1932 into the House of Representatives.

That's another thing that isn't likely to happen, but also it is something that might happen.
