in this world long enough to know is better than an uncertainty. We know and hear of many businesses and industries which are marking time, waiting to find out for sure what Congress is going to do about taxes, before they can make their plans intelligently for going shead. It may make all the difference in the world whether one kind of a tax or another kind is finally decided upon. But American business men and manufacturers have always had a happy faculty of adjusting themselves to conditions as they are, and when they know exactly what the conditions are we believe there will be a rapid and ceneral revival in manufacturing and trade.

Before the end of June the Presidential conventions will have been held and we will know exactly what each party promises in its platform and who it offers as its candidate for the Presidency. That will re-move another uncertainty. And we move another uncertainty. And we can then enjoy a pleasant summer, hoeing corn and fishing and talk-ing politics, with the satisfying knowledge that there isn't any more that we, as individuals, can do about the situation until elec-tion day. So we might as well tend THERE are some people who think it is a terrible thing to sell something you haven't got in the hope or expectation that before you have to deliver it you can buy it at a price lower than you have agreed to sell it for.
