SHORTENING THE WORKING

GENERAL shortening of the Ahours of labor in all branches of industry may come about as one result of the present business depression. An increasing number of large business concerns are operatgreat deal of discussion among business men of the possibility of making the six-hour day the standard. A bill has been introduced in Congress for the reduction of the working day on government work, with a corresponding reduction in compensation to each worker, and for the adoption of a general five-day week in all industries. We don't expect very much to come out of that, because we have given up expecting Congress to do anything to bring about the millennium. But we hear encouraging reports from industries that have adopted the shorter day and the shorter week, and it wouldn't surprise us to see this movement grow very rapidly.

Of course, the earnings of workers are necessarily less, individualwhen they work shorter hours; but it takes more workers to operate the business and, on the whole, it seems a better thing for the nation at large to have everybody earning something than to have a few earning big pay and a lot earning nothing. Fewer people are going to be able to buy luxuries in the next few years than were able to buy them in the few years preto buy the few years p er than that of the people of any other nation in the world. And if the five-day week and the six-hour day will result in putting everybody back to work, then we are for it.

sion by special act of Congress, President Hoover put his finger on one of the weakest spots in our pension system when he vetoed the Omnibus Pension Bill. This is an annual affair which usually has a great many meritorious claims in it, but frequently also contains claims of would-be pensioners who are not by any stretch of the imagination entitled to be supported by the public. As Mr. Hoover pointed out, the people of the United States should not be taxed to pension a man who was court-martialed for drunkenness and conduct prejudicial to good order, and was finally discharged without honor for the good of the service, or for a man whose injuries were incurred in attempting suicide, or for a soldier whose only injury was the loss of a leg by being run over by a street car when he was lying on the track intoxicated. Those are only a few of the fraudulent claims for pensions which were included in this year's Omnibus Pension Bill.

By all means, we think, every man who has ever proved his will-ingness to die for his country has ing on a five-day week. There is a special claim upon the nation's great deal of discussion among busthe greatest care should be taken at all times, and especially now, to protect the nation against frauduent pension claims.

MARY A. NOTSON. Reporter The wets are expressing great joy because some well known drys have expressed themselves in favor of letting the people again express themselves upon the prohibition issue. These drys are not at all afraid of the outcome. Some of them, like William Allen White, seem like old war horses which sniff the smoke of battle from afar and are impatient to be in the thick of the conflict. However, the wets are exceedingly mum they are called upon to set forth what they propose as a substitute for the 18th amendment. They have nothing to offer except repeal.

However, a small and misinformed number of them are falling back to buy them in the lew years placed in that there is no differs in Canada. Each province differs everybody earned twenty-five perwise much from the others in its system. everybody earned twenty-five per-everybody earned twenty-five per-much from the others in its system. The only thing which prevails in cent less for the next ten years from 1920 to they did in the years from 1920 to all provinces in Canada is "gov-1930, our average income and buying power would still be much high-"government sale." The basic pringing power would still be much highciple is that the purchaser must procure a permit, and the profits go into the public treasury.

The wets commend this system as promoting true temperance. They also say it is a most successful way of "controlling" the evils of the traffic in liquor.
