THE LINDBERGH TRAGEDY.

THE most shocking tragedy in American history since the assassination of President McKinley, thirty-one years ago, is the ruthless murder of the Lindbergh baby, by the fiends who stole the infant from its crib and hid his body in the woods when they found themselves pursued.

We can imagine no crime worse than this. Nothing could be more shocking, nothing could so move the hearts of the whole world to pity for the little one whose life had hardly begun, to tearful sympathy with his beloved young parents and to stern and righteous anger at the perpetrators of this foul deed.

To the gallant "Lone Eagle" and his no less heroic young wife, Anne, we can only say that we know that we speak for every one of our readers in trying inadequately to express our heartfelt sympathy. We know that they will bear up bravely, for both of them have proved heroes are made. It is the very irony of fate that to them, who merited nothing but happiness should have occurred a tragedy so awful that for the rest of their lives they must live in its shadow.

There should be no plea for mercy in this case. "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my children you have done it unto Me." That is the stern denunciation of the Lindbergh murderers which has come down to us through the ages. And if, as a result of the indignation public feeling which this crime has aroused, there should be a restoration of our country to its historic state of law and order, then we may again quote from the same inspired and sacred source: "And a little child shall lead them."

the acquittal of a known criminal. It lies at the door of every judge who has given convicted offenders light sentences or has suspended sentence altogether. It lies at the door of every sheriff, every constable, every police officer who has fallen short in his duty of relentless pursuit of criminals and suppression of crime.

No more terrific indictment of an entire nation can be drawn than our indictment by the rest of the civilized world, which today looks upon the United States of America as the paradise of the criminal and upon our people as the most cowardly and supine race, in the face of outrageous lawlessness, to be found upon the face of the globe.

We hope that out of the death of a little child may spring a flaming spirit which will fire the American people, not to vengeance but to relentless determination to set our house in order, to give known criminals no quarter, to bring before the bar of justice every one who has conspired with criminals to evade and escape the law, and so to put our country back into the list of civilized nations.

We call upon our public authorities, from the President of the United States to the most remote town constable, to make the suppression of crime and lawlessness the chief aim of their office from now on, and we promise them that, in taking the most drastic means at their command to clean the cesspools of crime, they will have the hearty and unhesitating support of every good citizen. And, at the same time, we warn them that unless speedy evidence is given that the long arm of the law has not yet in America lost its power, those responsible for its execution, who fail in their duty will face an aroused popular indignation which will put a speedy and effective end to their careers.

We heartily approve and endorse the declaration by the President of the United States that this crime must be kept "a live and never-to-be-forgotten case, never to be relaxed until those criminals are implacably brought to justice." But it must not end there.

It will not suffice merely to find and to punish the murderers of little Charlie Lindbergh. The times, and the temper of the American people, demand that the pursuit of criminals and the extirpation of crime, of defiant criminals and of organized crime, shall never be relaxed until none shall dare to affront the majesty of the law and to drag the fair name of America into the dust.

There should be no plea for mercy in this case. "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my children you have done it unto Me." That is the stern denunciation of the Lindbergh murderers which has come down to us through the ages. And if, as a result of the indignation public feeling which this crime has aroused, there should be a restoration of our country to its historic state of law and order, then we may again quote from the same inspired and sacred source: "And a little child shall lead them."

Oregon School Praised

By Nation's Editors University of Oregon, Eugene, May 18.—The school of journalism at the University of Oregon won highest praise at the recent meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors held in Washington, D. C., according to word sent Dean Eric W. Allen by Donald J. Sterling, managing editor of the Oregon Journal, who was in attendance. The Oregon school was favorably compared to those of Columbia University and University of Missouri, and placed in the front rank with these institutions, Mr. Sterling declared.

At the time the meeting was held it had not yet been decided to retain the school on the campus here, and the newspaper society passed a resolution praising the school and expressing the hope that some way might be found to keep it going.

The resolution reads: "Resolved that the American Society of Newspaper Editors reiterates its adherence to the principle that the time calls for an ever more able and highly trained personnel for journalism. It continues to urge that schools of journalism work toward higher standards of education. The Society observes with pleasure definite signs of organization in this direction. It notes especially the changes about to be put into effect at the Pulitzer school of journalism, Columbia university, changes which we believe are improving the quality while reducing the quantity of graduates of the school.

"The society, furthermore, expresses its appreciation to Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University of Oregon, and Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism at the university, for the splendid work performed by the school of journalism during its 20 years of useful service. It is the hope of the American Society of Newspaper Editors that in due time the school will be re-established on the same plane which won for it deserved high rank among schools of journalism in the United States."

GOOD BUSINESS

A good business man is always held in high esteem because he will not violate any law that defeats the chief aim in life—that he be lived in greatest abundance.

The man who acquires a fortune and dies early in life is not a good business man; he has failed in life's most important end. He has not had the business sense to take care of the most precious thing to him—his health. What is life worth to you if you are dead, or even half dead?

Sometimes I have to hammer it into the heads of my most intelligent patrons, that their activities amount to slow but certain suicide! Some take the warning; of course some do not.

Here are some serious faults that many so-called business men indulge in daily: Rushing from home mornings, with insufficient breakfast to fit the body properly for the day's work. Dining downtown, at "luncheon" to save time; these two principal meals of the day are almost ignored in the interest of "business." Going home at the close of hours, tired, worried, often exhausted in mind and body, to swallow a heavy dinner. Lastly, retiring late, in the belief that the gorge will be digested at bedtime.

The function of healthy sleep is to repair the nervous and mental wear of the day. This wear is not repaired in a sleep that is simply stupor—unconsciousness—the stupor produced by the bludgeon, the knockout. It is not healthy, invigorating sleep; it awakens with more tired than when we fell on retiring. Such conduct takes its toll in deaths before death should occur. The "heart-failure" of the newspaper diagnosis; the cerebral hemorrhage on men aged before their time.

ON OREGON FARMS

Oregon City—The effectiveness of planting grass seed in the spring, as well as the ability of certain grasses to survive on land that is very wet in winter and spring, and very dry in summer, will be determined in a new trial planting on the farm of Charles Grassick at Estacada. The trial was arranged by County Agent J. J. Inskeep, with seed supplied by the Oregon Experiment station. Grasses included are English rye grass, velvet grass, harding grass, red top, Astoria bent grass, white clover, timothy, ladino clover and Reed canary grass.
