he can reach. Nobody has yet found the perfect answer to the problem of industrial unemployment. One reason is that it is a new problem, as human events go. A hundred years ago there was no industrial unemployment worth mentioning, because there were no industries worth mentioning, in the modern sense. Generations of people who had no contact with the land had not been accustomed to being born and reared and living their lives in cities and industrial communities, without any means of support except the wages that they received when the factories were running. Now we have millions of people who have no resources to fall back on when business conditions compe industry to shut down, unless they have been among the thrifty few who have saved up something.

Mr. Ford thinks this is all wrong and so do we. We agree that the word "unemployment" has become one of the most dreadful words in the language, and the condition of unemployment has become the concern of every person in the country. And we certainly agree with him that charity, in the ordinary sense, should be resorted to only payers do not object to paying when every possible means of help ing people to help themselves has something for their money. IN OREGON HOMES

Fossil-An unusually accommo-dating woodbox has been built by a Wheeler county homemaker who describes it as follows: "This woodbox, located next to the stove, has the lower section for wood with a narrow shelf above for kindling. A second shelf above is for newspapers. Since the box is just across from the sink, I have added still another shelf for cleaning mater.

she canned $56.40 worth of vegetables and $118 worth of fruit. In addition this homemaker stored or used fresh vegetables amounting to $70.80 and fruits valued at $92.28. The state wide trend toward livingathome or "homemade living" is gaining impetus. The garden project is supervised by Gertrude Skow, home demonstration agent.

Cove—Dried applesauce is the specialty of a hospitable Swisshomemaker of Cove. She explains that she makes it as follows: "I cook the apples in the oven with very little water. I cook them as dry as possible without burning them, then spread them out on plates, making a paste about half an inch thick. When the paste gets dry on top I turn it over. This dried apple sauce is delicious in winter. It is good, also, in fruit cakes and puddings."
