

IONE

distance who were present were Mrs. Hattie Van Schoiack, her daughter May and her grandson, all from Portland, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Hamblin and Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Hamblin of Hood River, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Van Schoiack and children from Umatilla and Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Van Schoiack of Heppner.

Miss Gladys Brashers who has been a student for the past year at the La Grande Normal school, is at home for the summer vacation, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Ray motored over last Thursday to bring her home. Miss Myrtle Lindley has been spending her two weeks' vacation at the Willard Blake country home. Miss Lindley is a sales lady at Liebe's, Portland.

James E. Burdett, president of the Oregon Taxpayers' Equalization and Conservation league, and Mr. Galloway, who is also a member of the state league, called on Laxton McMurray, president of the county league, one day last week as they were passing this way after having transacted business in Heppner.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bryson and two sons and Mr. Bryson's father, J. H. Bryson, motored to Walla Walla last Sunday. Here the party from Ione was met by Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bryson and daughter of Clarkston, Wash. All enjoyed a picnic dinner. Mr. Bryson, Sr., accompanied his son Bert when he and his family returned to Clarkston, and plans on visiting in their home for two months or more.

The annual strawberry feed given by the Masonic brothers was held Saturday evening in the lodge dining room. The affair was well attended by members of the order and invited friends, who did full justice to the delicious ice cream and strawberries, cake and coffee. Following the "feed" dancing was enjoyed. Music was by Charley Batts and son Robert.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lovell and three sons from Estacada were over the week end visitors at the home of Mrs. Lovell's brother, Lonnie Ritchie in Ione and the home of her sister, Mrs. Bob Allstott on Rhea creek. The Lovells are former residents of Ione.

Mr. and Mrs. La Grande and two children from Richmond, California, were recent visitors at the home of Mrs. La Grande's sister, Mrs. Clarence Biddle on Willow creek. From here they motored to Baker for a visit with Mrs. La Grande's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Salter. Mrs. Biddle and son Billy and daughter Darline accompanied the La Grandes to Baker. She returned home Sunday.

Twelve members of Ione Boy Scout troop No. 83, the scoutmaster and several members of the American Legion and auxiliary motored to Lehman Springs Friday, returning Sunday. The scouts making the trip were Junior Mason, Denward Bergevin, Harlan McCurdy, Eugene and Harry Normoyle, Ellis Pettyjohn, Maurice Feeley, John Farris, Bobby Morgan, John Ray, Elwayne Lieualien and Francis Bryson. The scoutmaster is Alfred Balsiger.

Others in the party were Earl Blake, William Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bergevin and Betty, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Beckner and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mankin and two children. The trip was a most enjoyable one. The scouts established a regulation camp. Revellers called them from their slumbers at day break and retreat was the signal for them to retire to their quarters at night. They built a bridge which passed inspection, but one member of the party made the statement that swimming and eating seemed to take up most of the boys' time. The camp cooks were Fred Mankin and William (Baldy) Hayes and it is no wonder those boys ate, for the two gentlemen proved themselves to be excellent cooks. Earl Blake acted as life guard. From all members of the party we hear words of praise for the courteous treatment they received from those in charge of the Lehman Springs resort, and appreciation of the moderate charges for the accommodations.

Mrs. Elmo McMillan and daughter of Salem are guests at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Swanson.

Virgil Esteb who has been spending a year in study at Linfield college, McMinnville, has returned to Ione for the summer vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Ekleberry, newlyweds, were given an old fashioned charivari by their friends Monday night at the W. H. Chandler home where they are staying at present. The jolly crowd gathered at the George Krebs home and went to the Chandler home in a body. There were treats and everybody had a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ritchie who have been making their home in Heppner for some time have moved back to Ione, their former home.

Rev. Williams of Condon will speak in the Congregational church Sunday evening, June 26, and next Sunday morning as announced last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Allyn who have been in light housekeeping rooms in the M. Jordan home have now moved into the Congregational parsonage.

The O. E. S. Social club are laying plans for an old fashioned celebration in Ione on July 4th. Come and enjoy the day with us. There will be a picnic dinner at noon and a ball game in the afternoon. A big dance will be given in the evening and during the dance the Social club quilt which is on display in the Bert Mason window will be raffled.

School district No. 35 will hold the annual school election on June 20 at the school house.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Grimes and Mrs. Helen Farrens returned Sunday from a pleasant visit with relatives and friends in Hardman.

Garland Swanson is spending a few days with home folks. He will return shortly to his studies in the Eyerly Aviation school, Salem.

Mrs. A. M. McEwe, worthy matron, and Mrs. J. W. Howk, treasurer of Locust Chapter No. 119, are attending grand chapter in Portland this week. Mrs. Homer Lyons of Salem is a guest at the home of her mother, Mrs. Helen Farrens.

Handicrafters Meet.

The Matteson Handicraft club held a meeting on June 9th in the schoolhouse. The song, "The More We Get Together" was followed by the regular order of business. Under old business several members reported that all reports were up to date; under new business, members were given copies of 4-H club goals, to be learned for the next meeting. Several are now working on letter racks; others on magazine holders. Demonstrations were practiced. One visitor was present. The next meeting will be on Thursday, June 23.—Edna Hughes, Reporter.

EYE DOCTOR COMING. Dr. Clarke, Portland, EYE SPECIALIST, will be in Heppner, all day and evening, on his regular monthly trip, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, JUNE 17 and 18, at Hotel Heppner. SEE HIM ABOUT YOUR EYES. Consultation free.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Morgan and son Milton were visitors in the city Tuesday from their home at Ione. Milton, who suffered a broken arm some time ago, was here to receive attention at the hands of a physician.

President's Son

Richard F. Cleveland, whose father, Grover Cleveland, was twice President of the United States, will make the speech in Democratic National Convention nominating Governor Albert C. Ritchie for the Presidency.

WRITER SEES SIGNS THAT THE UPTURN HAS BEGUN

By CALEB JOHNSON.

Up to a very few years ago Stock Exchange prices interested only a comparatively small number of people. Until the war we had no large class of investors in America. When the war came along and the Liberty Bond campaigns began, millions of people for the first time paid out money in exchange for pieces of paper—for securities. After the war they found they could sell those securities for something more than they had paid for them. They hadn't expected to make a profit when they bought them, but they did make a profit, or at least got their money back. It was easy, then, for bond salesmen and stock jobbers to persuade the same people to buy other securities, and for a while the security markets kept going up, so that speculators could sell at a profit. Within a very short time we became almost an entire nation of stock market speculators.

And then the bottom dropped out. It dropped out because stock prices had gone up to figures which had no relation whatever to the value and earnings of the companies in which they represented shares. The minute international disturbances unsettled international trade and the market for commodities suddenly got narrower, resulting in the slackening of business and industry, shares should, in theory, have dropped to their actual values.

Instead of that, they dropped away below their actual values, and because it necessarily takes a long time to bring about economic readjustments, and our country alone could not cure the situation, because so much of it hinged upon the economic condition of Europe people who had tied up their money in stocks and wanted to get it out began throwing them on the market at whatever price they could get, and that sent the market down still lower.

And as is the way of human nature, people who have thus suddenly found themselves in a difficult situation have been looking in every direction for a miracle to happen that would put them back to where they were without any effort on their own part.

"The government ought to do something about it." Well, the government has been trying to do something about it and a very large part of the activities in Washington and in the capitals of Europe and in the headquarters of the League of Nations for the past two years has been the effort to do something about it. But as each step in these governmental and international attempts to restore the economic balance has failed to work a miracle over night, the attitude of the stock market has become one of distrust of every governmental effort and activity.

It must always be remembered that the people who went into the stock market to make money went in with the idea that they could get rich without working. A very few do succeed in doing that, but the great majority of people who play the market always lose in the long run. If, when the market crashed, everybody who owned stocks had just taken his medicine and said, "well, that's that," and forgotten about it, and kept right on working at his regular business or his job, we wouldn't have any such difficulties as we have been going through. But that, again, is not in accordance with human nature.

What the people who set out to make money without working want is something that will restore the fictitious profits which they think they made, or should have made, in that effort. Such a restoration of security prices probably never will come about. It is extremely doubtful whether the present generation will ever see the list of Stock Exchange securities selling at such high prices as they were selling in the Spring of 1929. But down in Wall Street they are still looking for miracles to happen, and the other day stock and bond prices began to go up.

What started them up was the announcement that a syndicate of bankers headed by Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan and Company had raised a fund of $100,000,000 in cash with which to buy good securities, bonds and stocks, not for the purpose of speculation, but because they are good investments at the present prices.

That was something that Wall Street can understand. It was their own people, spending their own money, who were talking. This was not some governmental scheme promoted by politicians at Washington, but it was the decision of hard-headed bankers that the time was ripe for them to buy.

The mere announcement of this program has had a most tremendous effect upon the psychology of the investing and speculative public. So far as New York and the stock market people are concerned, it meant the definite beginning of the upturn. It reassured the people who had been hesitating about buying for fear that prices might go lower, and it encouraged the people who owned depreciated securities to hold on to them in the belief that their prices will go higher.

It was a remarkable example of the psychological effect of a gesture on the part of people in whom the investing public has full confidence. I am writing this because, in the past few days, I have become convinced that we have not only reached the bottom of the depression, but are beginning to come up, but there is no use in expressing an opinion of that kind without some facts to back it up. Too many people have been saying for a long time that the upturn was just around the corner. It is nearer than that now. It is right here.

The immediate effect of even a slight rise in the stock market, if the higher prices are maintained is, among other things, to stabilize the value of stock market securities as a basis for bank loans. This in turn should enable a great many persons who could use money for productive purposes but have been unable to get it, to obtain loans and so start bank credit into circulation again. The banks have plenty of money but they have not had enough demand for properly secured loans.

A great deal of the recent hesitation on the part of business and industry about going ahead has been the doubts naturally raised by the political hullabaloo in Washington, as to what form of taxation would be adopted in the new revenue bill. That is all settled. Was the government going to economize? That has been settled. We have balanced our budget and the government's credit is not going to be unduly strained. There was a lot of undercurrent talk for a while about the possibility of the United States going off the gold basis. There never was anything to that, but the imagination of a terrified few, but it had its effect in keeping men off of means on the anxious seat, so they were actually afraid to risk their money. That is all over. It is perfectly clear that we are not going off the gold standard.

There are two more things which will have to be over and done with before the business and industry of the nation will get back into full swing. One is the political nominating conventions, and after those are over I look for another sharp although perhaps not very prolonged rise in the stock market. The next is the Presidential election and, whichever way it goes, it will be regarded as having at least defined the country's policy for the next four years, and so another element of uncertainty will have been removed.

In the meantime, the governmental agencies, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which have been entrusted with the job of loosening up credit and saving some of the railroads and big industries from ruin have been doing their job pretty well. The Federal Reserve Banks are cooperating to the best of their ability under the law. It has been, in many ways, the most curious depression in that it has been largely a state of mind. There has been a lot of unemployment, but almost nothing approaching actual starvation. A great many people have stopped buying luxuries, and have taken reductions in salaries and wages, but on the other hand there has been a general decline in rents and in almost all commodity prices, so that by comparison with three years ago the living scale of the majority of the people has not been greatly reduced.

And I believe that I am perfectly safe in saying that as I write this, early in June, 1932, the worst is over, and we can look for fair weather ahead in business and finance.

No man wants to be a failure in life. He wants to make the greatest success possible. The merchant, the doctor, lawyer, all aim to be successful. Surely we ought to strive to be successful Christians.

Salvation means two things: leaving some things and clinging to other things. When we leave sin and unbelief we enter into Christ; when we leave Christ we enter into sin and unbelief. Many Christians fall because they do not leave their sin when they take their Christian vows. A man can be a success at nothing by giving only half time to that work. If we are to be successful Christians, we must give Jesus all our heart. We must let the world know where we stand on every question. Sinners see Christ, not through the eye of faith, but through us.

We must study our Bibles to receive food for our souls. The Bible is a weapon. We need it to fight Satan. If we are successful Christians, we must have access to God. We should go to Him with all our problems and sorrows and wait on Him until He speaks back to us. Let us so live that we can hear His welcome words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

A welcome awaits you at all our services.

In Spite of Infirmity!

"There was given to me a thorn in the flesh." 2nd Cor. 12:7.

Milton was blind. Beethoven was deaf. Helen Keller was blind and deaf and dumb. Michelangelo had a broken nose. Pope was made so crooked by disease that he was called an interrogation point. Alfred the Great was afflicted with a disease that did not allow him an hour's rest.

Homer, Virgil, Horace, Pascal, Dante, Cowper, Hawthorne, Carlyle, Bacon, Livingstone and Ruskin were all invalids, semi or confirmed. It is marvellous how many men and women who have achieved great things have been tortured with some physical infirmity.

Naturally we regard bodily affliction as a misfortune; but oftentimes it is a misfortune which proves to be the shrine of a larger fortune. Often the brightest characters and the greatest successes come out of physical suffering and mental travail. It seems as though suffering is many times necessary to develop one's latent powers and possibilities.

But whatever else we may say about it, we do not need to surrender to physical affliction. It may handicap us, but it does not necessarily preclude the possibility of achieving something worth while. The cases cited above are only a few out of a long list of those who bear witness to what may be done under the handicap of bodily distress.

"There was given me a thorn in the flesh," says Paul. Yet what a career he achieved in spite of that thorn. If you have been given a thorn in the flesh, you will gain nothing by whimpering and complaining about it. To surrender and give up because of it would be an ignominious thing. Instead of doing either, you should accept the challenge of the thorn and in spite of it, prove yourself. Let the thorn be a challenge to prove what you can do, in spite of infirmity. The same grace which was all-sufficient for Paul, is available for every person under the shining sun of heaven this hour, the grace of Jesus Christ; with it you can battle thru and win in spite of any thorn in the flesh.

We invite you to come and worship with us if you have not a Church home. Be here this Lord's Day for the Bible School and the Communion Service.
