A WAVE OF PROTEST

Autocaster Service. BUSINESS men, manufacturers, property owners of every class and kind are joining in the wave of protest against increasing Governmental expenditure and mounting taxes.

Marshall Field & Company, the largest department store in the world, we believe, have issued a circular to their wholesale customers in which they point out that while last year Federal, State and local taxes took almost 22 cents out of every dollar of private income, the proportion will be higher this year because of the greatly reduced income.

Expenses have not been reduced; they have been increased. According to the Field tabulation, since 1927 our Federal costs have increased 63 per cent, from $1,964,000,000 to $3,195,000,000 a year. And as this is written Congress is still in session and is trying to spend another couple of billion of tax money, though where it is to come from nobody knows.

This is all wrong. It is time to call a halt. We see only one way to do that, and that is to make election the watchword of the coming campaign. No man should be supported for election to any office in which he will have anything to say about taxation or the spending of tax money who will not pledge himself to reduce expenses and taxes, even if by doing so he loses a few votes when he comes up for reelection.

We think that nine-tenths of Governmental extravagance is due to the desire of legislators to please groups and individuals whose votes they desire. It is nothing short of robbery, in our opinion, for a man in public office to impose taxes upon one class of the public in order to spend the money for the benefit of another class, whose votes, he hopes, will perpetuate him in power.

It is time to stop.

WE WILL HEAR SOME SILVER TALK

Autocaster Service. WASHINGTON will have plenty of unofficial observers at the British Empire conference at Ottawa. Many questions which may directly affect the United States are to be discussed among the delegates from the various members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Among them will be the monetary position of silver, which Canada wants restored to its pre-war status. Canada produces about a quarter of the world's silver. India consumes about half of all silver. India has been trying to maintain the gold standard, and that has forced the price of silver down until Canada can no longer make a profit on it.

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for July 24. RED SEA DELIVERANCE. Lesson Text: Exodus 14:10-16, 21-22. Golden Text: Exodus 15:12. Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

The experience of Gods saving power in a life does not mean that the conflict with sin is at an end. It explains why so many Christians fall in the hour of crisis. Here are two million former slaves, each one of whom had experienced in a marvelous way God's delivering power. They had found peace and security at a time when all Egypt was plunged in sorrow and tears, and yet, even with the memory of this mighty Passover miracle, they are so soon in a panic of fear and distrust. With the Red Sea before them and the pursuing Egyptian behind, they complained bitterly to God and to Moses. Thus often in the presence of physical, financial, or other peril do we forget that God is not limited in resources and is equal to our every need.

Faith is paralyzed by fear. Faith is undermined when, like Israel, we dwell upon the difficulties before us, substituting reason for dependence upon God. While the sound of the chariot wheels of the Egyptians draws nearer and nearer and the fear of Israel reaches despair, the most unexpected of all things takes place. Unable to turn back because of the pursuing host, hemmed in by mountains on either side, lo! the Red Sea opens, a God-given highway stretches before them; so that the slow moving host of men, women, children, and beasts of burden may pass over unharmed and in peace.

The experience, as we shall find, is typical of all Israel's journeyings. When they were willing to obey the word of God and go forward as the pillar of cloud led the way, their foes were always subdued. Nothing could exceed the discomfiture of these Egyptians who, with their chariot wheels removed, sank to death in the depths of the sea. The cloud which lightened the way of Israel was darkness to the pursuing host.

On the outcome of the silver discussion at Ottawa will depend the date and program of the international conference on silver and commodity prices which is to be held later in the summer, with the United States taking part.

"It falls far short of the economies proposed," said President Hoover when he signed the Economy Bill with its limited savings of only 2.9 per cent. Congress hates to cut costs and may cut its own throat thereby. Business men who have been forced to cut expenses from 25 to 50 per cent can't have much patience with such a stubborn refusal to reduce the staggering cost of government.—The Dailies Optimist.

The discovery in a school on Staten Island of a copy of the rare "Breeches Bible," printed at Geneva in the year 1560, has revived interest in the various versions of the English Bible. This particular version gets its name because it says that Adam and Eve made themselves "breeches" of fig-leaves, instead of "aprons," as the King James Version translates it.

No perfect copy of the Bible has ever been printed, according to one of the officials of the American Bible Society. Misspelled words and other errors appear in every direction. The Authorized Version of the Bible as it was first published in 1611 would be hard reading today. Modern Bibles follow modern spelling, but in the time of King James the Bible appeared with such spellings as "Fougie vs our dettes as we fougie our detters."

The simplification and modernizing of the Bible goes steadily on and at least two complete new translations have recently come out, but the stately phrases of the Authorized Version have become so much a part of the common speech of English-speaking people that it is unlikely the new phraseology will ever be so widely accepted.

The demand for college-trained women in business is one of the interesting developments of modern times. Talking recently with the head of one of the largest department stores in America, he said that the only way he had found to obtain salespeople and clerks of the high degree of intelligence and character his store required was to employ only college women, when they could be got.

Colleges for women are new things; the oldest is less than seventy-five years old. They had to fight their way in the face of a general prejudice against educating girls. They have always been "hard up," having to make a dollar do the work of three, while men's colleges have obtained large endowments. Now the seven leading women's colleges have united in an appeal for financial aid in carrying on the work of giving girls an equal chance with boys.

It takes courage and faith to try to raise a fund of thirty million dollars in times like these. If it were men who were trying I would say they hadn't a chance. But when women start after something they usually get it, so I have hopes that Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar and Wellesley will find their money somewhere.

H. N. Sherwood, Professor of History in University of Louisville, says: "I am in agreement with the nine members of the Wickersham Commission. Until there is submitted a substitute for the eighteenth amendment which shall conserve the gains of federal prohibition and at the same time improve the present system of liquor control, it is good citizenship to make no change in our constitution."

To repeal prohibition because it "cannot be enforced" is to admit that government by the people is a failure. A part of the difficulty of enforcement arises from the increasing use of the motor vehicle and the airplane. A prominent stockman in Eastern Oregon asserted that increased 500 per cent in Eastern Oregon, and that this was due to the use of the motor truck in transporting the cattle. Did the stockmen and the State surrender because it was difficult to catch the cattle thieves? No, they enacted the "gasoline cowboy act" which has discouraged the thieves. Instead of surrendering to the lawless elements, if we are real Americans, we should stay on the job and ultimately win out. If there is a better way to handle the liquor traffic, let it be brought out into the light. Nullification is not the way out.

The Governor's unemployment relief fund of last winter proved a "life-saver" for self-supporting students at Oregon State college, providing part-time work for 240 men students, many of whom otherwise would have been forced out of college and in competition for outside jobs, according to the annual report of Mrs. Lulu M. Howard, employment secretary with the campus Y. M. C. A. Of the $209,917.18 contributed to this fund by staff members of the college, about $3500 was used in providing work for men students, aside from that used for women. Men listed for jobs this year total 1181 and these earned an estimated total of $22,000 from work obtained through this campus employment bureau. A large percentage of student employment is derived directly or indirectly from the college community itself, Mrs. Howard points out.

Hillsboro—The sight of farm owners in overalls out doing their own work is strange to a man used to Hawaiian agriculture, says F. G. Krauss, director of extension work in the Hawaiian islands who recently visited the Tualatin valley. Farming in the Islands is done by hired help entirely with the owners living elsewhere. Mr. Krauss believes that the direct personal interest shown here by the farm owners is responsible for conditions better in many respects than those in Hawaii.

Science is constantly discovering that so-called superstitions and ancient folk-myths have their foundations in fact. That is, after all, to be expected, since these beliefs are the result of countless centuries of human observation. The reasons popularly held for many observed phenomena may be, and usually are, wrong; the facts at which intelligent people once scoffed often turn out to be true.

The latest superstition to receive scientific confirmation is the "evil eye." The belief that some persons can affect the physical condition of others by merely staring at them has long been held in the Mediterranean countries. Professor Otto Rahn of Cornell University told a meeting of scientists the other day that he had discovered that the human eye gives off emanations, the parently of the nature of ultra-violet rays, which are powerful enough to kill certain low forms of life, such as yeast cells.

What is more probable than that some very sensitive persons might be affected by these rays given off by the eyes of an individual in whom this power is highly developed?

W. C. T. U. NOTES

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter. That the record may be kept straight, it is well to recall that nine of the eleven members of the Wickersham Commission declared that it would be a mistake to repeal the 18th amendment without putting a constructive substitute in its place. They also recommended that the saloon must never come back, that the federal government should not give up control of the liquor traffic, that the government should not go into the liquor business, and that wine and beer must not be exempted from the amendment. You would think from the statements of the wets that the commission was opposed to the 18th amendment in all particulars.

It is also well to keep in mind that the commission found that there was "increased efficiency of labor, elimination of blue Mondays, decrease in industrial accidents, increase in savings, and decrease in demands upon charities and social agencies." These things are well known to all careful observers. The commission also stated that "there is general agreement among social workers that there has been distinct improvement in standards of living among those with whom such workers come in contact, which must be attributed to prohibition." This finding is also confirmed by all careful and unbiased observers. With these things to the credit of prohibition, is it such a "failure" as the wets say it is?

The WAY of LIFE BY BRUCE BARTON TO THE LAND

Here and there we run across a fact which shows that important social changes are working themselves out silently in a time like this.

For instance: The insurance companies are experiencing a rather brisk demand for some of the farms they have had to take over during the past few years.

So are the Land Banks. In one southern city a canvass of the unemployed revealed nine hundred families that had formerly lived on the land. These people were moved out to vacant farms and are being helped to self-support.

The president of a charity organization in a middle western city came to see me, with figures showing the abnormal growth of our cities, and particularly of the negro population in northern cities, in the two decades between 1910 and 1930. Said he: "In my own city we are feeding many thousand people, including almost the entire negro population. The negro is the first to suffer in a time like this, for the white man is likely to be favored in the distribution of jobs. The negro is a good farmer. On an acre of land he can raise enough food for his family. Our city could well afford to build cottages and settle a large proportion of its unemployed on the land. For no more than it will cost us to take care of them in town another year we could make them permanently independent."

In the depression of 1873, the unemployment in our cities was almost one hundred per cent, but only a quarter of our people were in the cities; we were seventy-five per cent rural. The unemployed simply moved back to the land until the storm was over. The expression "back to the land" is unfortunate; it seems to imply defeat in the city and subsequent retreat. I prefer "forward to the land," to a freedom and security the city too often fails to provide. Certainly many men are now saying to themselves: "I should much rather have a roof over my head and potatoes and cabbages in the cellar than to be an ex-vice-president sitting on a cold curb stone."

Perhaps as a result of that thinking we shall find ourselves, one of these days, with a better balanced, less top-heavy social organization.
