Truly purity is power. Impurity and strength are separated from each other as far as righteousness and sin. Would you be strong to fight the battle of life? Be pure. Nothing enfeeblies a man like sin. Paul's counsel to Timothy, "Keep thyself pure," was sound and right. Paul knew that what he asked was perfectly possible to perform. To win against the demon of impurity, hang the red lantern of danger on every temptation, the indulgence of sinful thought, the indecent story, the vile novel. Shun the company of "lewd fellows of the baser sort," the fellows who are determined to sow their wild oats. Pray to God, your maker, for help to keep you out of the devil's grip. Fight as with the very strength of the Almighty, and never surrender. Remember, "God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."
We invite you to the coming services this next Sabbath day. If you are interested in the hour in which we live, be present at the morning service.

Miss Benton hopes to return to this work soon.

Tillamook—Many farmers here are showing increased interest in irrigation for certain crops. The general opinion is that the flooding or strip border method of applying water is impractical here, though County Agent Bergstrom is arranging for a demonstration of this if possible to check further on its possibilities. The over-head sprinkler system has proved successful on two farms, though it is more expensive to install.

Let's Turn Around

ONCE there was a man who was chased by a dog. He ran, and ran, and so did the dog. Finally, too tired to go farther, he stopped. To his surprise, the dog stopped also. They looked at each other for a moment, a great light gradually dawning in the man's head. He took a step toward the dog. The dog retreated. Another step. Another retreat. After a brief rest, the man took after that dog and chased him all the way back to where they had started from, the dog covering the whole distance his tail between his legs.
Depression and men are a good deal like that dog and that man.
