NOT ALL BAD.

IT DOESN'T take a long stretch of memory for those of the older generation to remember back to the days when beans, potatoes, sow belly and sauer kraut were the main piece de resistance on the family menu in the winter time. There was always a supply of perpetual sour dough for the biscuits, and plenty of milk and cream from the family cow. The larder was supplied with an abundance of canned fruit from the family orchard, and aside from what was required for the sugar and spices little ready cash was needed for the winter grubstake.

It was necessary for the people of that day to be provident. Many of the prepared foods in fancy packages which pack the grocery shelves today, bringing about a complete revolution in the family diet, were not then known. Modern furnishings and implements have lessened the labor required in very department of the household.

Today people live in greater comfort with less effort. Scientific methods of food preservation, better transportation facilities and advertising which created popular demands and resulted in widespread distribution have wrought the change.

Ease of living through the last great era of prosperity caused people to forget the good old days. They became less provident. Children born in late years have thought that bananas grew in store windows and that it was necessary to have a can opener to milk a cow.

When business recedes, money gets scarce and hides. It seems pretty tough not to be able to get hold of enough cash to supply all the provisions for the table from fancy packages and paper sacks. But many people have remembered the good old days. More family larders are filled with beans, potatoes, sow belly and sauer kraut than there were a year ago. And the winter isn't going to be as tough. Anyway that's the kind of grub that sticks to the ribs.

THE COST OF LIVING.

Autocaster Service.
THE cost of living has been steadily declining in the United States for ten years. Today is nearer to what it was before the war than it has reached since 1913, according to government statistics which have been issued. The war sent the price of all commodities up until, in 1920, it cost the average city dweller just about twice as much in rents, fuel, food, clothing and other essentials of life, to say nothing of luxuries, as it had cost for the same things seven years before. In ten years two-thirds of this increased cost has been lopped off, so that today the general average living cost is only about a third greater than it was in 1913.

The period of high commodity costs was, however, the period of our highest national prosperity. From 1922 to 1929 prices maintained a fairly even level of about 70 percent more than in 1913. Everybody was busy, everybody was earning more money than we had ever earned before, more goods were being produced and sold at profitable prices than ever before and the people of the United States were in a happy and contented frame of mind. Then the sudden drop in commodity prices began and we have had hard times, business depression and unemployment ever since.

It seems to us that here is conclusive proof that prosperity is dependent upon high prices. All of the statesmen, economists and financiers of the world agree that it is true. An intensive and widespread effort is being made to find a way of restoring and increasing commodity prices. An international committee is to meet shortly in Geneva to prepare the plans and program for a world-wide conference of governments in the effort to find some way to solve this problem. In the meantime, the upward trend has begun in many commodity lines and the whole outlook seems to be toward better prices, which means, in the long run, the resumption of production and the restoration of prosperity.

The women of the country are in favor of prohibition by a large majority, notwithstanding the noise made by the wet women's organizations.

At the meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Seattle, the organization voted 582 to 13 to protest the insertion of red-lead planks in the platform of the leading political parties. The women of the country are in favor of prohibition by a large majority, notwithstanding the noise made by the wet women's organizations.

With 7,500 educators present at the recent meeting of the National Education association a resolution was adopted by practically unanimous vote endorsing the impartial enforcement of all laws including the 18th amendment.

Recently the Literary Digest carried a new review under the head, "The Price of Drinks." It was based upon the findings of about sixty agencies of old life insurance companies of the United States and Canada. The findings were based upon the tabulated life history of more than two million persons. It was found that the span of human life was reduced on the average by the use of intoxicating drinks from 4 to 6 years.

Dr. Alphonse Bertillon, formerly chief of the Bureau of Municipal Statistics of Paris, and noted as the originator of the famous Bertillon system of criminal identification, and a famed student of the causes of mortality, reached a similar conclusion from an independent study.

Dr. Edwin F. Bowers concluded from these figures that on the average each drink of intoxicating liquor shortens the life of the drinker 25 minutes. Does it pay?

All the figures used in the new review were based upon data in the United States prior to prohibition and in France and Germany where there has never been any prohibition.

Col. Patrick H. Callahan, of Louisville, using the figures of the vital statistics gathered by the United States census bureau, shows that, in spite of the fact that prohibition has not been enforced 100 per cent, there has been a saving of 169,400 lives during the first eleven years of prohibition. In the light of these investigations, no one can truthfully say that prohibition has been a failure.

ON OREGON FARMS

Many Rodents Poisoned.
Eugene—Gray digger ground squirrels on 156 tracts of land containing a total of 21,408 acres were poisoned in Lane county this year at an average cost of 17 cents an acre. Twenty-one rodent-control supervisors appointed by the county court paid for the expense of the work and will collect the amount due from each farmer with his taxes.

Garden Bid of Morning Glory.

Roseburg—Almost complete eradication of the garden pest morning glory, has been obtained through the use of chemical sprays by P. W. Beckley, Dixonville road, working in cooperation with County Agent J. C. Leedy. Application of about three pounds of sodium chlorate per square rod was made in late July and a second lighter application in October of last year. The soil was left unplowed and undisturbed this year and an almost perfect kill has resulted at a cost of less than 40 cents per square rod.

Praises Seaside Lettuce.

Seaside—This part of Clatsop county has ideal conditions for the production of summer lettuce, according to C. W. Davenport, agricultural agent of the Green Northern railway, who spent some time here assisting in packing lettuce for the eastern markets. Seaside farmers are taking an active interest in producing summer lettuce. 30 growers recently meeting under the auspices of the county agent to talk over their marketing problems.

Seasonable Hints
Say what we please about "scientific" canning, there is a whole lot of good argument in favor of the cellar shelves that sag with home style fruit jars, filled with a variety of small fruits, home-canned. And, if I do not miss in judgment, we are going to need them this winter.

The humble gooseberry grows wild in most localities—and sugar is not prohibitive in price. No pie is better than a good, gooseberry pie at any season of the year. Let me relate a little incident: A 12-year-old girl in my vicinity came down with something that caused an intense jaundice. The family doctor in charge advised that mother to give the patient "all the gooseberries she would eat."

I don't know whether I'd have advised that—but I do know that the child recovered in short order. I am not advising you to try it, if you have jaundice; I'm just scoring one for my old friend the gooseberry.

I'd just be glad to know that you have a good store of canned raspberries, strawberries, grapes, tomatoes, cherries, plums, and whatever you have growing next to you. I am awaiting the time here, when the dewberries ripen, they grow wild in old, deserted fields, that have not paid the farmer with other crops. I am getting dewberry and blackberry minded, at the time these lines are being penned.

And, I envy our folks who are storing the "smoke-house" with choice country hams, etc. They eat just as well as when they were fifty cents a pound—bear that in mind. Don't you adore country-cured ham and bacon? The ayes have it. Yours for a full smoke-house and pantry this fall.

Gas Is Great Farm Aid; Ripens Green Tomatoes

Science seems determined to make modern farming just one gas attack after another. The up-to-date grower gasses his prune trees to kill root borers, puts a different gas down a gopher hole to kill the pests, and now he can turn still another gas on his green tomatoes to speed up their ripening.

Tomatoes out of green ones has just been described in detail in a new circular of information issued by the Oregon State college experiment station and written by A. G. B. Bouquet, vegetable crop specialist. Ethylene gas is the material used in this way and it may now be purchased in various sized drums. It is not recommended for use by the ordinary farm gardener with but a few surplus tomatoes, but for the large market gardeners the process is proving practical and economical, according to Professor Bouquet.

"Under ethylene gas treatment tomatoes take on a bright red color in from four to six days, depending on the state of maturity when treated," the circular states. "Fruits treated in this way are said to have a better flavor and decreased acidity in comparison with those ripened on the vines or ripening naturally after being picked in a green condition."

The tomatoes may be ripened in this way in standard crates for the gas readily penetrates the average style of container. The method is believed useful in treating tomatoes in green state just after light frost frosts. The circular may be had free.

"You and Your Child"

The theme of the family life series of radio club programs is available from Station KOAC, this fall, according to Mrs. Zelma Rodenwald, director of home economics radio programs. The first club meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, October 4, with the special lecture over KOAC "on the air" at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Sara Watt Prentiss of the school of home economics at Oregon State college has been secured as the radio speaker for the six club meetings and the seven supplementary broadcasts which make up this series. Club topics and dates are as follows:

1. October 4—Your club and yourself.
2. October 18—You and your child.
3. November 1—Habits for happiness.
4. November 15—Anger and its control.
5. November 29—Self-control through obedience?
6. December 13—Analyzing and routing fears.

Any club may enroll or any group of homemakers may form a radio club. In fact, even two neighbors may meet every two weeks and discuss themselves and their children with the aid of outlined programs, reference material and the radio lectures. The programs, assistance in organizing and other aids are free to homemakers of Oregon. The only obligation of the local group is to hold its meetings where there is a radio and immediately following each meeting send in a report on the work done.

"Radio clubs are no longer an experiment," according to Mrs. Rodenwald. "They have proved themselves to be an effective means of carrying the educational resources of the state to scores of Oregon homemakers each year."

Detailed plans of radio club organization may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Rodenwald, Station KOAC, Corvallis.
