READING-LAMPS
 In winter, with the great supply of American newspapers and attractive books, most of our reading is done by lamplight. Let me offer a few valuable hints, drawn from long observation.
 Some time ago, I sat in a busy hotel in the delightful region of the Missouri Ozark mountains. The large lobby was artistically dimmed by shaded lamps—daytime, mind you—until the great room gave one the impression of being in moonlight! Outside the light was perfect, scintillating with violet rays. Inside, the guests huddled here and there, trying to read newspapers by dim, ineffectual light from the heavily shaded lamps. I was one of the guests. I had difficulty finding a spot light enough to enable me to read.
 It is fashionable to light homes in that manner; floor-lamps with beautiful shades adorn living-rooms. Here children try to search out lessons and news from printed pages. They strain young, growing eyes to decipher the intelligence printed on the page. Daddy may have the best-lighted seat, in his favorite rocker; mother next. Children on the outskirts, do their best to read with ease to their eyes, but soon tire, and, finally are driven to bed, tired and sleepy from the dim reading light.
 But it is fashionable—the twilight effect in softened light. I see it in many homes, and I confess, sheepishly, that my own living-room is lighted just that way—I am telling tales out of school. But, "an honest confession"—you know.
 The best possible artificial light is that which approaches most nearly to DAYLIGHT. Ground-glass globes, not muffled down to dimness, and not pulled too near the eyes—the light coming over the shoulder, is best for young eyes. Parents should by all means be careful of the children's study.
 Carl Bergstrom, wheatgrower of Gooseberry, and his father, Eric Bergstrom, were visitors here on Monday. They bring the report that grain is coming up well.

NERVES OF STEEL
 All of Jesus' days were spent in the open air—this is the third outstanding testimony to his strength. On the Sabbath he was in the synagogue because that was where the people were gathered; but by far the greater part of his teaching was done on the shores of his lake, or in the cool recesses of the hills. He walked constantly from village to village; his face was tanned by the sun and wind. Even at night he slept outdoors, when he could—turning his back on the hot walls of the city and slipping away into the healthful freshness of the Mount of Olives. He was the type of outdoor man whom our modern thought most admires; and the vigorous activities of his days gave his nerves the strength of steel.
 He stepped into a sailboat with his disciples late one afternoon, and being very tired, lay down in the stern and was almost immediately asleep. The clouds grew thicker and the surface of the lake which had been quiet a few minutes before, was broken into sudden waves. The little boat dived and tossed, and still he slept. His disciples had grown up on the shores of that lake; they were fishermen, accustomed to its moods and not easily frightened. But they had never been out in such a storm as this. It grew fiercer; water began to come in over the side, every moment seemed to threaten destruction. At last they could stand the strain no longer; they went to the stern and woke him.
 He rose without the slightest suggestion of hurry or alarm. A quick glance was enough to give him a full understanding of the situation. He issued a few quiet orders and presently the menaced boat swung into the smoother waters of safety.
 Call it a miracle or not—the fact remains that it is one of the finest examples of self-control in all human history. Napoleon said that he had met few men with courage of the "two o'clock in the morning variety." Many men can be brave in the warmth of the sun and amid the heartening plaudits of the crowd; but to be wakened suddenly out of sound sleep, and then to exhibit instant mastery—that is a type of courage which is rare indeed.

 Jesus had that courage, and no man ever needed it more. In the last year of his public work the forces of opposition took on a form and coherency whose significance was perfectly clear. If he refused to retreat or to compromise, there could be but one end to his career. He knew they would kill him, and he knew how they would kill him.
 Next Week: Strength, Assurance, Calm.
