might be some basis for such deduction. Suffice it to say the men who stayed at Hotel de Sherman were more enriched by their comradeship and had a "better time" than the men who may have had a hotel room each to himself. At Hotel de Sherman was evidenced true democracy.

LET'S GET A NEW DOCTOR.

MAYBE a chiroprapist has been working on Uncle Sam for the toothache. Ever stop to think of that?

In other words that which ails the country may not be cured by the doctor attending the patient. It's worth giving a thought.

For some time whenever anything has gone wrong with war debts, employment or business generally, Washington has summoned a group of the country's outstanding economy specialists. They have mulled over the various symptoms and held clinics over the minutest crumbs, yet have failed to produce a cure. They are agreed on the symptoms, but are at a loss to tell from whence these arise. Hence, not being able to get to the seat of the trouble, it is impossible for them to produce a cure.

They cannot see that Uncle Sam, with his pockets full of gold and plenty to eat all around him, is crazy in the head as he staggers in a starving condition. Maybe a new doctor couldn't help him, but wouldn't it be good sense to call in a psychologist or psychiatrist who is supposed to know something about human gray matter?

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

ONE commentator on the Eastern Oregon Wheat league conference held last week at Condon saw in it a new trend. At this conference the farmers themselves took a more active part in formulating the league's recommendations and did not fall in line with everything proposed by their government servants, as he said had been done largely at conferences in the past.

People are coming more generally to realize that popular government should exist for the benefit of the governed and not for those doing the governing. "It is time for the government to cut the cloth to fit the suit," he said was the prevailing sentiment of farmers.

Another group of farmers met recently at Ione and aired their opinions. Their demand for lower salaries of government employees, $5 car license fee, no new road construction, and other extremist measures do not sound so good to those who receive pay from the government or have the expenditure of public funds.

Still another commentator on the league conference said too much stress is being put on tax and economy measures and not enough on the matter of increasing commodity prices, wherein lies the only hope for the farmers' salvation.

What all of these are asking from the government is assistance in balancing the family budgets, instead of throwing them deeper into the red by attempting to force a balance of government budgets. Lawmakers and public servants must realize the people are aware that any attempt to balance any government budget is an idle gesture until the budget of those who pay the bills is balanced.

But at Condon, while discussion of taxes, budgets and economy was rampant, there was a more significant indication of the times. Another commentator, still said, "Many farmers, not through choice, availed themselves of the facilities of Hotel de Sherman." Something of odium may seem to have been connected with the mention of this hostelry, by use of which farmers were able to attend the conference at small cost. And from the point of view of the sociologist, there

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. Charles E. Dunn, D. D.
The Christian's Use of Leisure.
Lesson for December 11.
Mark 6:30-32.
Golden Text: I Cor. 10:31.

One of the greatest needs of the American people is to know how best to use their abundant leisure. With a reduction in the number of hours of work, this problem has become of vast importance. To its solution the Church must resolutely address itself.

There are certain phases of the present situation that are not reassuring. The motion picture largely operates in the direction of undermining the taste and thought of the nation. The automobile makes us a vast company of speeding gadabouts in restless motion. And the radio places us at the mercy of jazz bands, crooners, and similar vulgarities of high-pressure salesmanship.

On the other hand, there are undoubted possibilities for good in these machine-made sources of recreation. The movie theatre is certainly preferable to the saloon, and there are pictures beyond criticism both from the standpoint of art and character building. The automobile has revived the old-fashioned family outing, promoting shared recreation in the out-of-doors. And the radio enables us to listen to symphony concerts, addresses, and inspiring church services.

The problem, then, becomes one of choice. We must learn to discriminate between the wholesome and the unwholesome. One is always on safe ground if he keeps Jesus and the Christian ideal in sight. The Golden Text urges us to do all we do "to the glory of God." If we follow this admonition, we can never wander far.

Instead of high-powered, exhausting amusement, we shall choose simple, restful, health giving fun. Like our Master, we shall seek contact with nature as often as possible, and cultivate a few kindred spirits, whose friendship can heal and restore our jaded selves. Moreover, we shall seek recreation that demands personal participation rather than passive inspection.

"Come away, all of you," said the Master, "to a quiet place, and rest awhile." We all need to escape from the strain of life. God help us to choose those forms of merry-making that will enrich and beautify our days!

Missionaries . their value

Mrs. Pearl Buck, who wrote the great novel of Chinese life, "The Good Earth" confirms from her own intimate knowledge of conditions in China that many good Americans have long believed, that a great deal of the Christian missionary work in the Orient is not only wasted effort, but actually detrimental both to the cause of Christianity and the reputation of America in the Chinese minds.

Important religious leaders and bodies have been making a study of the missionary situation. They report that too many persons are sent out as missionaries who are narrow minded, bigoted and entire sectarian in their outlook, and who have not the educational and temperamental equipment for the job.

Magnificent social work has been done by many missionaries, but when the Chinese observe so-called Christians quarreling among themselves over inconsequential points if doctrine they not only don't know what it is all about, but begin to distrust the professed motives of the missionaries themselves.

One of the fundamental teachings of Christianity is the duty to "go forth into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," but it isn't everybody who is qualified to preach the gospel to those who have never heard it.

Telephones . and distance

The dream of telephoned conversation between all parts of the world has almost come true. There are now 168,000 miles of international telephone circuits, which connect with almost all the land line telephones in the world, so that telephone conversation between the remotest part of South America to Northern Europe, between South Africa and Chicago, or any other point in North America, between San Francisco and Manila or Japan across the Pacific, in fact, between almost any two parts of the world, is not only in practical use but is in almost daily use.

This telephone is one of those incredible marvels which we accept as commonplace because we have got used to the idea of talking with people at a distance. I can well remember the very first telephone and the skepticism with which Professor Bell's announcement that he could talk over a wire was received. Nobody believed that it could ever be true, no more than they believed that some of the other things which I have seen come true were possible, such as the electric light, the phonograph, the motion picture, and especially the airplane.

Birth . . . . a certificate

I had occasion the other day to apply for a passport to enable me to leave the United States and make a trip to Europe. But my first attempt was blocked when the passport bureau demanded proof that I was born in the United States. I just didn't have any such proof. I was born long before any of the states required the registration of births.

IN OREGON HOMES

Grants Pass—A vegetable-fish exchange between families in Josephine county and others in Curry county has proved effective, according to Mrs. Sara W. Wertz, home demonstration agent of Josephine county. Mrs. Wertz reports that 10,000 cans of beans, tomatoes, corn, apples, peaches, pears and pumpkin were traded for 10,000 cans of fish during the month of October. Another aid in these "cashless" times was the Josephine county portable community cannery. A total of 656 families of the county took advantage of this cannery during July, August and September, according to Mrs. Wertz who kept the records of operations. During this three-month period more than 85,000 cans of fruit, vegetables and meats were canned. This is believed to represent a total saving of at least $10,000 worth of food in Josephine county.

Movies . . . and Moe Mark

An old friend of mine named Moe Mark died the other day at the age of sixty. When I first knew Moe he was running a little nickelodeon in Buffalo, the kind of a show where you could put your eye up against a peep hole and see Mr. Edison's first attempt at motion pictures.

Pretty soon Moe Mark had a theatre showing the early primitive motion picture plays. Before long he had a number of theatres in different Up State New York towns. They weren't theatres really, they were merely stores with chairs in them.

Moe Mark got the idea that a real theatre built especially to run motion pictures would be profitable. He found it difficult to make anyone else believe it, but he finally raised money to build the very first theatre in the world for movies. It is called the Strand and is on Broadway in New York.

Moe Mark was one of the real pioneers of the motion picture industry, and if anybody ever asks you who built the first movie theatre, of which there are some thirty thousand now, just remember his name.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter.

During the recent campaign it was asserted many times that Norway was one of the countries which had adopted prohibition and later had repealed it. Now, the facts are that Norway never did have prohibition in the sense that America has prohibition. Light wines and beer were not prohibited. During the five years the law was in effect prohibiting the stronger liquors, there was never drunkenness from drinking wine and beer. Smuggling was carried on with little effort to curb it. The wine producing countries brought heavy pressure to bear upon Norway to repeal her so-called dry law.

Now the sales are handled under a government monopoly. The right to sell wines and spirits is given to a company, and a portion of the profits go to the government. It is the profit which concerns the government.

However, the monopoly feature is not such a success as it was expected to be. A news dispatch of October 22 from Oslo says that home brewing is playing havoc with the liquor law enforcement. The government is greatly concerned over it. It has been increasing to an alarming extent since the repeal of the so-called prohibition law. And, as you might expect, this condition is blamed to the so-called prohibition law which was repealed in 1924. Anyone with a reasonable amount of intellect can easily see that it is the government profit sharing plan which adds to the price of the liquor sold by the monopoly, and this high price encourages the home-brewer to make his own. To combat this situation the government has reduced the tax three times, but still the difficulty continues. It is evident that government control of liquor does not control and that the moonshiner and home-brewer and the bootlegger were not abolished by repealing the so-called prohibition law.

One of the professors in the University of Oslo blames it all upon the so-called prohibition law. My what a fine thing to have a scapegoat! He says, "Home-brewing and the increasing drunkenness have even led to the necessity of padlocking the meeting halls of the young people's associations." He says that "Other causes are the present economic depression in the country and the growing unemployment among young people." Who would have thought there was any unemployment in a wet country, or that there was any depression in such a country? No one ventures to complain that the government is spending a lot of money trying to enforce the law against smugglers and home-brewers.

If the 18th amendment should be repealed or nullified, do not for one minute expect that the moonshiner, the home-brewer and the bootlegger will go out of business. The maker and vendor of illicit liquor flourished in the old saloon days. He will be in the business if we return to the legalized liquor traffic, and he will have a much better chance to cover his tracks then.

ON OREGON FARMS

Farmers to Plant Forest Trees

Oregon City—Clackamas county farmers are preparing to make use of some of the trees obtainable from the Oregon Forest nursery at Corvallis this fall in planting windbreaks, shelter belts and woodlots. Species recommended for this county are Western Yellow Pine, Black Locust, Douglas Fir, Port-land Cedar, and Western Red Cedar. These and other sorts may be had for about a fourth of a cent a tree in large quantities.

Dufur—The Large Cheese variety of pumpkin proved the best from the standpoint of quality, yield and disease resistance among 20 varieties of pumpkin and squash grown here on the Burton and Son farm in a cooperative experiment to find vegetables resistant to the curly top disease. E. F. Dana, federal pathologist at the state college experiment station, supervised the test and has since arranged to have canning trials made of the Large Cheese variety.

THE FIRST MIRACLE

The Gospels tell a different story. The life of Jesus as we read it in the scriptures is what the life of Lincoln would be if we were given nothing of his boyhood and young manhood, very little of his work in the White House and every detail of his assassination. All of the four gospels contain very full accounts of the weeping which attended the crucifixion; John alone remembers the laughter amid which the first miracle was performed.

It was in the little town of Cana, not far from Nazareth; and Jesus and his mother had been invited to a wedding feast. Often such a celebration continued several days. Everybody was expected to enjoy himself to the utmost as long as the food and drink lasted—and it was a point of pride with the brides' mother that both food and drink should last a long time.

Enthusiasm was at a high pitch on this occasion when a servant entered nervously and whispered a distressing message to the hostess. The wine had given out.

Most of the guests were too busy to note the entrance of the servant or the quick flush that mounted to the hostess' cheek. But one woman's sight and sympathy were keener. The mother of Jesus saw every move in the little tragedy, and with that instinct which is quicker than reason she understood its meaning. She leaned over to her son and confided the message:

"Son, the wine is gone."

Well, what of it? He was only one of a score of guests, perhaps a hundred. There had been wine enough as it was; the party was noisy and none too restrained. Besides, there was a precedent in the matter. Only a few weeks before he was tortured by hunger in the wilderness, he had refused to use his miraculous power to transform stones into bread. If the receding of his own strength was beneath the dignity of a miracle, surely he could hardly be expected to intervene to prolong a party like this.

Did any such thoughts cross Jesus' mind? If they did we have no record of it. He glanced across at the wistful face of the hostess—already tears sparkled under her lids—he remembered that the event was the one social triumph of her self-sacrificing life; and instantly his decision was formed.

He set for six pots and ordered them filled with water. When the contents of the first one was drawn, the ruler of the feast lifted his glass to the bridegroom, and the bewildered but happy hostess: "Every man setteth on first the good wine," he cried, "and when men have drunk freely, then that which is worse. But thou hast kept the good wine until now."

The mother of Jesus looked on in wonder. She had never fully understood her son; she did not ask to understand. He had somehow saved the situation; she did not question how. And what was sufficient for her, is sufficient for us.
