THE AKRON DISASTER.

THE LOSS of the huge Navy dirigible "Akron" with seventythree lives is the most serious disaster since men first began to navigate the air. W. C. T. U. NOTES MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter.

It is amusing to note the numerous alibis the wets are putting forth. Although we have been told over and over that the restoration of beer would put the moonshiner and bootlegger out of business, nov we are told that if a drunken driver is arrested, the drys will claim he was drunk on 3.2 beer, when in fact he will be found to be drunk on moonshine. In all probability ther.

will be drunken drivers who can justly claim that they became but it is also very probable tha there will be drunken drivers who became drunk by drinking beer which is the same as the old four percent by volume beer, is not intoxicating. Congress can no more by law change the intoxicating character of alcohol than it can repeal the law of gravity.

Moreover, it is not the noticeably drunken driver who is the greatest menace to the traveling public. It is the driver whose muscular reac eral times, it has been determined by eminent scientists that one glass of a second to two-fifths of a sec lar reaction is slowed down to two ed. With beer on sale everywhere we may expect great increase in reach this class of drivers. Another amusing thing put out by the wets is that the brewers, vendors and users of beer must be very careful to see that beer is used in moderation during the next faw weeks because any excess may result in people refusing to vote for the repeal of the 18th amendment on July 21. They thus admit the contention of the drys.

It is also amusing to hear one of the leading exponents of the repeal of prohibition warning his viet to me: "Here in America the Jews God." I propose in the next few brethren that the drys have the advantage in that their speakers are more able than the wet speakers. Also, that the drys always have plenty of money with which to finance their campaigns. The crowd that makes money out of the sale of liquor always has ample money for campaign purposes. They fight from a purely selfish standpoint. The drys, in many instances, may take the view that it is good business for other lines of business to fight the liquor interests, but such business men do not put up the large sums of money which the wets put up for campaign purposes

Nationalism , a kick-back

A lot of the world's present troubles are due to an excess of Nationalistic pride. Every nation is try-ing to be self-contained, and then grouching because other nations won't trade with it!

Every dollar we spend for for-eign goods helps some other nation to buy our goods. I believe in America first, but I do not believe in the stupid doctrine which would prohibit me from buying something wanted because it was made abroad. Nearly a hundred years ago there was an agitation in this country similar to the "Buy American" movement of today. The party which advocated non-intercourse with foreign countries got the nick-name of "Know-Nothings." Preswe will wake up again to the truth that every obstacle to international trae hurts everybody con-

Jews in Germany

Jewish people all over the world re greatly disturbed over the pol of the new "Nazi" government of Germany, under the practical dictatorship of Chancellor Hitler, in boycotting Jewish merchants, doctors, teachers and others.

I talked the other day with an in telligent young German Jew who had been getting letters from home about the situation in Germany. He was not at all worried. His people had written him that they were not being annoyed and that the whole anti-Jewish agitation was directed er Sholes has just been celebrated. at a Communist element, mainly composed of Jews.

But, of course, the German gov ernment has handled the situation stupidly, as it always handles any situation. More than a hundred years ago the great French historian, Guizot, wrote: "There is something in the German temperament which makes them utterly unable to understand the point of view of other peoples."

something people overlook, Nobody has yet made a machine that can think, an nobody ever will.

Telephone . . another step

Everybody who has a telephone must have wished for some sort of an attachment which would answer automatically when the subscriber is away. Word comes from Vienna that just such a device has been invented and is in use there. When on is going to be out of telephone reach he sets the implement to the hour when he expects to be back Then, if a call comes through in his absence the caller hears a gong ring to indicate the hour when the person called will return. When he returns he finds a record of all

It will be easy to develop that idea into a phonograph record which would say "Mr. Smith has gone to Florida but will be back on the fifteenth," or whatever other message it is desired to convey. Something of that sort will comsome day.

Typewriter . has birthday

I have a vivid memory of the day when my mother received a letter from her younger brother in Buffa-le, with the words printed instead of written with a pen. He said: "This letter is written on a new kind of machine we have got in the office, called a typewriter.'

That was almost sixty years ago; shout 1876, I should say. The typewriter was only three or four years There was quite a celebration organized by the Young Women's Christian Association. The typewriter, they held, had emancipated women by making it possible for them to do work in offices. I don't think that is soundreasoning.Hard ly anybody but men used typewriters for at least twenty years after the machine was invented.

The rush of women into busines began in the early 1890's, after the telephone people had broken down the barriers that kept women out
